

Control of spending goal

Senate passes budget reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Friday unanimously passed a budget reform bill completely revamping congressional procedures in an effort to bring federal spending under control.

Sponsors hailed it as one of the most important measures before Congress in years. They said that, under its provisions, Congress for the first time would be able to act on the budget intelligently and wisely.

Senate passage, by an 80-0 vote, sent the bill to conference with the House, which passed its own version last December.

There are differences in the details of the two measures, although each sets up essentially the same framework. But the Senate action virtually guaranteed a budget reform bill will be sent to President Nixon in a month or two.

The bill in effect would require Congress to adopt its own budget each year, setting its own priorities as opposed to what the president recommends. Then there are procedures seeking to guarantee it lives within its budget.

The push for the legislation has come from ever-deepening frustration felt by most legislators in dealing with spending issues in recent years.

The frustration has been fed by the fact that there have been deficits in 16 of the last 20 years, that about 75 per cent of the budget now is considered uncontrollable, that the federal debt has increased $200 billion in the last 20 years with $100 billion of this in the last few years, and that inflation has steadily eroded the value of the dollar.

In Nixon's term of office, open warfare has broken out between the chief executive and Congress over spending issues.

The President has denounced Congress as fiscally irresponsible and has resorted to the wide use of impoundments to enforce his own ideas of priorities.

Congress has charged that the President is seeking to deprive it of its constitutional power to control the purse.

Under its present system, Congress deals with the budget in 14 separate appropriations bills, which are never tied together in any systematic way or related to the expected revenues for the year in question.

The bill would change this drastically.

First, it would provide much more information on spending programs and revenue sources through creation of new budget committees in each branch and a professionally staffed Congressional Office of the Budget, which would serve both sides.

Then, it would set up a detailed new timetable for action on the budget.

On Feb. 15 each year the president would submit his budget.

On April 15 the Congressional Office of the Budget would make public its detailed analysis of the chief executive's proposals.

On May 1 the budget committees in the Senate and House would send to the floors for debate a resolution that would in effect be a congressional budget.

The resolution would have to be adopted by June 1. Congress then would have two months to act on all of the appropriations bills and other measures containing new spending authority.

Food prices soar again

WASHINGTON (AP) — The annual retail cost of a market basket of U.S. farm produced food soared $52 from January to February, government figures showed Friday.

The increase included substantial markups for both farmers and middlemen.

The increase pushed the food-price indicator to a record annual rate of $1,732 for a theoretical "typical" household.

Agriculture Department officials said $36 of the gain was due to larger margins by middlemen who process and sell food. Higher farm prices accounted for $16 of the increase, they said.

The $52 boost, a 3.1 per cent increase from January, was equal to an additional $1 per week in family food spending.

It was the sharpest since last summer when the market basket price jumped $124 or 8.1 per cent from July to August following removal of price curbs on food.

According to USDA calculations made at the request of reporters, the February basket cost of $1,732 annually was up 22.9 per cent from a year earlier.

Congress asked to put off clean air deadlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration proposed legislation Friday to delay certain clean-air deadlines and permit, or even order, increased burning of coal.

The package of proposals to amend the Clean Air Act of 1970 was unveiled at a news conference by Russell E. Train, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

But Train said he could not accept two administration proposals — to eliminate the law's protection of existing clean air, and to permit on-again-off-again use of antipollution equipment depending on the weather.

Those suggestions were also sent to Congress as "issues" for its consideration, but not as legislative proposals.

The proposed amendments would postpone for two years the full implementation of automobile antipollution standards.

Here is a summary of the main administration proposals for amending the Clean Air Act:

—Authorization for the President to require some power plants, on a case-by-case basis, to burn coal instead of oil or gas, until 1980, provided they do not violate air quality standards protecting human health, but suspending standards designed to protect the environment.

—Authority for temporary suspension of air pollution emission limits until November 1974, if necessary fuel is available, provided no imminent or substantial health danger is created.

—Authorization for the EPA to extend the deadlines in state plans for meeting air standards protecting the environment, where supplies of clean fuels are inadequate.

—Authority to postpone for five years the deadlines for cities to meet clean-air standards if their transportation controls would otherwise cause serious disruption; an additional five-year extension could be granted if necessary. The EPA said only a few cities such as Los Angeles might need more than one five-year extension.

—Authorization for the EPA to set standards requiring specific antipollution design or equipment for pollution sources which cannot be controlled through emission or performance standards.

—Provision of civil penalties of fines up to $25,000 per day for violations of air quality standards by stationary sources, in addition to the existing criminal penalties provided by the Act.

—Authorization for the EPA to extend compliance schedules for stationary sources past the act's clean-air deadlines where necessary to avoid plant shutdowns when antipollution equipment is nearing completion.

—Extension of the 1975-model automobile emission standards to continue through the 1976 and 1977 model years.

The two other ideas sent to Congress, opposed by Train and omitted from the legislative proposals, were:

—To permit "intermittent or alternative" antipollution control systems indefinitely, meaning to permit plants to operate without controls when regional air pollution standards are not violated.

—And to revoke the law's requirement, as interpreted by federal courts, that existing clean air may not be allowed to deteriorate even to the levels of the federal protective standards which must be achieved where the air is already dirty.

For 'national security'

Muskie campaign tap bared

By John M. Crewdson

WASHINGTON—At least one of the 17 wiretaps authorized by President Nixon for "national security" reasons provided the White House with political intelligence about the Democratic Friday an order to the Nixon administration that it turn over to him the records of the wiretap, which ran from May, 1969, until February, 1971.

The order, by Judge John Lewis Smith, affirmed a request by attorneys for Halperin for the summaries prepared by the FBI agents who monitored the wiretap. Nixon has said he personally approved the 17 wiretaps as part of an effort to stop leaks of classified information to the press.

The disclosure that politically useful information was being produced by the Halperin wiretap may help to explain why the former official was kept under surveillance longer than any of the others who were targets of the operation and despite the lack of any evidence that he had breached security.

Halperin, a Republican, served as an unsalaried adviser on foreign affairs to the senator from Maine after leaving the government.

According to confidential documents prepared by the FBI, the wiretap program lasted from May, 1969, until February, 1971, and involved at various times 13 officials of the Nixon administration and four newsmen, including White House official charges coverage of President Nixon distorted by news media. Page A-4.

ing two reporters for the New York Times.

Halperin is suing several present and former administration officials, including Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and the former White House chief of staff, H.R. Halderman, on the ground that the wiretap on his home phone, which was not authorized by a court order, was illegal and was intended primarily to monitor his political activities. He is the only one of the 17 to have sought the wiretap summaries.

Smith gave the government 10 days to surrender the wiretap material. Justice Department lawyers, who opposed the motion granted by the court, have indicated that they now will argue that some of the requested documents may be subject to a formal claim of executive privilege — a doctrine that protects the confidentiality of communications within the executive branch if disclosure would impair the orderly functioning of government.

To claim this privilege, Atty. Gen. William Saxbe would have to act before the 10 days were up.

In general, a judge's order for the discovery of evidence, such as Smith's Friday, is not appealable.

Halperin was one of the first government officials to be tapped following a report that appeared in the New York Times on May 9, 1969, about the then highly secret bombing of Cambodia by American aircraft.

Milk price hike ordered

SACRAMENTO (AP)—State agriculture chief C.B. Christensen Friday ordered a five-cent per half gallon hike in the retail price of milk, effective April 1.

The hike is needed to meet "skyrocketing production costs that have plagued the state's dairy industry over the past 18 months," Christensen said in a statement.

It is the fourth jump in the price of milk in the past 14 months, the state Department of Food and Agriculture said. The overall price of milk has gone up 15 cents a half gallon since February of 1973.

Depending on the milk marketing area, the latest boost will push prices per half gallon to a high 75 cents or 68 cents.

The price hike raises the possibility of a spontaneous consumer milk boycott. Roy Alper, a spokesman for 12 consumer groups, has said the boycott would probably come if Christensen ordered a substantial price rise.

Christensen said dairymen testified at a Feb. 27-28 hearing in Sacramento that they couldn't feed their cattle at today's costs and still sell milk at prices consumers were used to.

The 12 consumer groups had asked for a freeze in milk prices and called for a reform of California's complicated milk pricing system.

Christensen ruled out such a freeze, saying "I don't think we can do that now."

Environment, social perils cited

Alaska, Atlantic oil warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The President's Council on Environmental Quality warned on Friday that discovery and development of oil off the Atlantic Coast and Alaska would raise serious environmental and social problems.

The council said such offshore development could threaten environmental damage in ocean and estuary waters, especially from low-level chronic oil spillage, but the impacts could be even more pronounced on land.

There, the council said, the construction of refineries, pipelines, petrochemical plants and other supporting facilities, plus the resulting attraction of new industrial and population growth, could drastically alter local characteristics.

And the increased income from such development may not benefit present area residents, but rather workers who move in with the new developments, the Council said.

The council, nearing the end of a year-long study, released its factual findings Friday but did not issue any conclusion or recommendations; spokesmen said those would not be issued until they have been presented to the President and are ready for publication, now scheduled for April 18.

The factual findings, therefore, neither favored nor opposed oil and gas development in the oceans off the shores of the Atlantic coast and Alaska, but pointed out potential problems and the need to solve them if development is to take place.

Among the possible impacts, the council said that "less land will be farmed ... due to the demand for large land parcels for industrial development and to increasing land values and taxes."

"Commercial fishing may be seriously damaged both by water pollution and mechanical interference ... experience in Alaska indicates that per capita income of fishermen may decrease."

"Recreational industries could be hurt," the Council said, "especially where the character of the communities is one of isolation, historic preservation, or natural beauty."

"Resort and recreational patterns could be radically altered by offshore drilling and production."

"A major oil spill along the beaches of Cape Cod, Long Island or the Middle or South Atlantic states could devastate the area affected."

The industrial and economic growth of these coastal areas, the council added, might well be at the expense of other regions.

Vet discharge coding halted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Yielding to congressional pressure, the Defense Department announced Friday it no longer will code veterans' papers so employers can determine the reason for discharge.

Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., who fought for years against the policy, said the change would end discrimination against veterans discharged for relatively minor reasons, such as unsuitability for military life and attitude problems.

Hebert said many employers know the code and use the information to deny jobs to ex-soldiers who may have been honorably discharged.

"Just because the young man may have had two left feet on the drill field may be no reason to reject his employment in civilian life," said Hebert, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

Hebert said nearly 7 per cent of the men honorably discharged last year fell into the categories of "unfavorable reasons" for discharge.

"The nature of the discharge should speak for itself, and that should be it as far as the discharge papers handed to the veteran are concerned," he said.

"It is tough enough for a veteran with an honorable discharge to become gainfully employed these days without carrying the additional burden of something that may not be relevant to a particular job as a civilian."

Democratic Reps. Les Aspin of Wisconsin and Ed Koch of New York praised the Pentagon decision.

"The only purpose of those had discharge numbers was to punish a man for not conforming to the Pentagon's way of thinking," they said. "They did not deserve this punishment."

Burton buys gems for 2 Oroville lasses

Combined News Services

Actor Richard Burton, who is known to present his wife, Elizabeth Taylor, with a shiny bauble or two on occasion, has bestowed his generosity upon two Oroville girls.

Within the past week, Burton is reported to have bought a $450 ring of rubies and diamonds for a waitress, and another ring of unspecified worth for a jewelry store clerk. Burton also bought a $600 brooch for his wife.

Burton is on location in the Northern California mountain town of 8,000 shooting "The Klansman," a film about the Ku Klux Klan. Lee Marvin costars.

Kim Dinucci, 18, a pretty blonde, said Burton called to her as he crossed the street near where a scene was being filmed. They talked, and Burton took her to his trailer.

"He invited her to his trailer while his wife was there and they drank a coke together," said Wally Bean, publicity man for the picture. "If that constitutes romance, so be it."

The romance part of the quote refers to a newspaper story that implied Burton's relationship with Miss Dinucci was rather close.

"A lovely child," Burton was quoted as saying. "She reminds me of my oldest daughter, Kate."

But the starstruck waitress says she's engaged to her ranchhand boyfriend who isn't at all jealous. "It's no big thing," Miss Dinucci said. "We're just good friends."

"I see him every day and he is flattered the same as me that I was chosen," she said. "I feel very special to have been picked off the streets of Oroville."

The news reports also said Miss Owens, a part-time clerk at Marozzi Jewelers, got another ring from Burton while he was on his buying spree.

Snagged

The proposed nomination of Paul H. Nitze to a high Pentagon post is reported snagged because the White House is reluctant to antagonize Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, whose vote President Nixon might need in an impeachment test.

Nitze served four Democratic administrations in top foreign and military policy jobs. He has been recommended by Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger to become assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs.

Early this month, Goldwater went on record as "unalterably opposed" to Nitze's nomination, saying he linked Nitze with the regime of former Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara that "came very close to destroying this country's military capabilities."

Mort

Comedian Mort Sahl was hospitalized Friday after collapsing on a jet flight from Washington D. C. to Los Angeles.

Sahl's manager said he "had a terrible accident years ago in a racing car when he used to hang around with Steve McQueen and Paul Newman and he broke his back. His back has been acting up lately and causing him terrible pain."

Sahl, 46, appeared at a Democratic Party fund raising dinner in the Washington D. C. Thursday night and flew back to Los Angeles Friday.

Blasphemous

Antonio Ruiz, Spain's best known ballet and flamenco dancer, was sent to prison for two months Friday after pleading guilty to blasphemous utterances while shooting a television film in this town in southern Spain last summer.

Ruiz, known simply by his first name, told the judge in Arcos de la Frontera that he had not meant what he said. He was also fined $170 and became the only prisoner in the local jail, which had been empty for months.

'Battle of Birds' indecisive

Combined News Services

GRACEHAM, Md. — The first skirmish in the Battle of Graceham ended Friday night as millions of blackbirds resisted man's attempts to drive them out of their chosen home. As some 10 million birds winged their way back to their nightly roosting place, they were met with a noisy eviction notice in the form of a multimedia sound-and-light show designed to frighten them away—shotgun blasts, explosive devices, sound equipment blaring forth startling and crow distress calls, and ultrasonic frequency noises designed to jam the birds' communication network. The noise had some effect and an estimated 80 per cent of the birds darted about in confused patterns, unable to settle in the trees. But several million others found a spot in the humans' defensive line short on firepower and settled into the pines again as they have done every night since last year to the chagrin of Graceham's 400 residents. Will the birds return later? No one knows, but everyone hopes not.

Mariner cameras hum

LOS ANGELES — The two television cameras were turned on aboard Mariner 10 Friday in preparation for transmission of the first closeup pictures of the planet Mercury beginning at 4 a.m. today. A spokesman at Caltech's Jet Propulsion Laboratory near Pasadena said everything was going well aboard the spacecraft, which will zoom to within about 415 miles of the surface of the planet nearest the sun.

Viet Cong truce, election plan

WASHINGTON — The Viet Cong Friday proposed a six-point plan that included detailed provisions for a new cease-fire and the holding of general elections in South Vietnam. American officials, who read the text of the plan as broadcast by the Viet Cong's radio, said it was the most concrete put forward since last year's Paris cease-fire agreement was signed and amounted to a detailed counter proposal to various plans put forward by the Saigon government. The proposal lists five main points: An immediate end to the gun-fire; return all the captured and detained Vietnamese civilian and military personnel; immediate and full guarantee of democratic liberties; quick formation of a Council of National Reconciliation and Concord; holding of free elections.

'Antiunion' laws

LONDON — The 2½-week-old Labor government announced Friday it is scrapping legislation by the former Conservative government which was branded "antiunion" by labor unions. It said it will make it legal again for strike pickets to halt vehicles "for the purpose of communicating with people in them." At the same time, in a new anti-inflation move, the Price Commission set up by the Conservative government ordered major food retail firms to make a 10 per cent cut in their gross profit margins from April 1, which could mean a 2 per cent cut in retail food prices. The Department of Employment, meantime, announced retail prices rocketed 13.2 per cent in the past 12 months—highest one-year increase ever registered in Britain.

Golan duel continues

Israeli and Syrian tanks and artillery duelled in the Golan Heights Friday in the 11th consecutive day of what a frontline Israeli commander called a war of attrition. In Jerusalem, an Israeli government official said the fighting could hinder scheduled indirect talks on troop disengagement arranged by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. On the Suez front, meantime, Israel charged Egypt with exceeding its permitted artillery strength in the Sinai buffer zone.

Defense cutback plan

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford proposed Friday night that U.S. military spending be cut $4 billion in each of the next four years to reach a stabilized annual level of $70 billion and bring the defense establishment "into line with world realities." Addressing a Brown University symposium on defense policy, Clifford said although there has been a general relaxation in world tensions, President Nixon's fiscal 1975 defense budget is still designed "to meet what we felt to be the (military) needs at the height of the Cold War."

Gas picture improving

WASHINGTON — The Federal Energy Office said Friday the nation was only about five per cent short of gasoline last week, continuing this month's substantial improvement. The FEO also said the gasoline allocation system should become increasingly responsive to present distribution needs with the office's adoption of rules to speed up allocation adjustments.

POW kin expenses

WASHINGTON — The Senate passed by voice vote Friday a bill that would pay travel expenses to and from burial services for the families of dead U.S. prisoners of war whose remains are being released by North Vietnam. Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., introduced the measure just a few hours before the vote.

A plan to isolate Israel

ALGIERS, Algeria — The executive commission of the nonaligned nations Friday proposed measures to isolate Israel economically and politically as a means of forcing a peace settlement in the Middle East. In a communique issued at the end of a three-day closed meeting attended by 17 member nations and 23 observers, the commission also called for a greater share of the world's wealth for developing nations and criticized U.S. policies in various parts of the world. The commission called on all nonaligned nations to break diplomatic ties and all economic and cultural exchanges with Israel immediately, sought to explore means to exclude Israel from the United Nations, and asked nonaligned countries to use all possible pressure to convince pro-Israeli nations to change their policies.

Rightist assassinated

BUENOS AIRES—Two gunmen assassinated a retired right-wing national labor leader in Buenos Aires Thursday and another man's body, the victim of the third apparently politically motivated killing in one town in a week was found north of the capital, police sources said Friday. The deaths brought to 24 the number of persons killed in apparent political assassinations in the past six months of left versus right violence within the President Juan Peron's badly split movement.

East-West strategy

WASHINGTON—The United States held private, two-day talks with Britain and West Germany here this week to prepare for the next steps in talks with the Soviet Union about troop withdrawals from Europe. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has hinted at the importance of the working session while strain exists inside the North Atlantic Alliance over conducting common policy. "Under no circumstances will we sacrifice European interests in negotiations with the Soviet Union, no matter what our disagreements with the Europeans," Kissinger said.

Giving up

Sir Alec Douglas-Home, a Scottish aristocrat who was Britain's prime minister and twice its foreign secretary during 43 years in politics, announced Friday he will retire at the next national election.

Sir Alec, who will be 71 in July, said he will not seek re-election to the House of Commons from Kinross and West Perthshire in Central Scotland and asked his local Conservative Party organization to pick another candidate to succeed him.

Farewell

Sir Laurence Olivier ended 37 years at the Old Vic Theater in London Friday with the words, "All I have is a talent to amuse."

England's greatest living actor delivered the final line of Noel Coward's song, "If Love Were All," to a farewell party after the final curtain had fallen to his Old Vic career, during which he gave highly acclaimed performances as Hamlet, Henry V, Macbeth and Othello.

Lord Olivier, who at age 66 begins a sabbatical next month, said he was taking time off to see more of his wife, actress Joan Plowright, and his children.

Remedy

Former Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg said Friday night in South Bend, Ind., that impeachment of President Nixon "cannot solve all of our Watergate woes," but it might help "allay much of the cynicism which exists about our political institutions."

Goldberg, who served on the high court 1965-68, spoke at the dedication of the University of Notre Dame Civil Rights Center.

The framers of the U.S. Constitution realized the " enormity " of impeachment, he said, but they also recognized it " would be far more dangerous for the country to have no remedy against the betrayal of the public trust."

Anne 'had no time to be scared'

Princess Anne, under tight security on her first outing since escaping from an armed kidnaper, said Friday it happened so quickly she did not have time to be frightened so "I just got angry" with the attacker.

Her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, also disclosed in the couple's first public telling of the ordeal Wednesday outside Buckingham Palace that he kept the attacker talking in a desperate ploy for time.

The young couple gave their account to Somerset Parish Council Chairman Tom Kent and villagers who turned out to welcome them on a visit.

"I couldn't believe it was happening to me," the princess said, according to Kent.

The couple drove to the village from Windsor with the two horses they will ride in horse trials at nearby Cirencester today. They were escorted by a police jeep.

Meantime, a group calling itself the Marxist-Leninist Activist Revolutionary Movement said in a letter to the London Times that it was responsible for the kidnap attempt. But Scotland Yard said it would "would stick by the view that this was the work of one man."

Ambulance-chasing ring probe given 'top priority'

By NOEL SWANN
Our L.A. Bureau
Dist. Atty. Joseph Busch said Friday he would give "top priority" to his investigation into an alleged ambulance-chasing ring, which operated in past years at County-USC Medical Center.

Busch said he was looking for a fast investigation because the current grand jury completes its term in June.

Meanwhile, Supervisor Kenneth Hahn vowed that county supervisors would conduct a swift inquiry into the administrative aspects of the alleged operation under which members of the ring, according to a Los Angeles Times article, were able to get their business going by posing as volunteer workers at the county hospital.

Ground rules of the two separate investigations by the district attorney's office, and the Board of Supervisors were announced after a meeting between Hahn, Supervisor James Hayes and Busch. Although the secret session had been scheduled two days before, it did not become a formal meeting because two supervisors did not constitute a quorum.

NEVERTHELESS, after the meeting, Hahn reiterated his "horror" at the events described in the Times' expose and said if the Mexican Consulate were involved, as indicated in the latest of the Times' series, the matter may even go as far as the Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Hahn and Busch indicated that the dual inquiry between the board and the district attorney's office may even cover the U.S. Department of Immigration, because apparently many of the victims involved were "illegal aliens."

"The district attorney is taking his inquiry wherever it leads — to federal, state, county or city levels," said Hahn. "Wherever the inquiry leads, that's where we'll go."

Hahn indicated he was dissatisfied with answers hospital officials had given about the way they handled the case.

fighting "aspects" of the case before the Times' story broke.

Pressed for amplification, Busch said his staff had not been investigating the County-USC Medical Center or the Mexican Consulate or the Friends of the Friendless group — which the Times says was a charitable organization used as a front for the ambulance-chasing ring.

HOWEVER, when Busch was asked if he had been investigating the actual ambulance-chasing operation, purportedly run by George Hatcher, named by the Times as the ring leader, he replied, "I would prefer not to comment on that."

Both men were asked about the possibility of claims being filed by the victims of the alleged ring, and Hahn said any persons who felt they were victims of the ring should contact the county's public defender's office to discuss the issue.

Busch pointed out that because of the nature of the situation it would be "very difficult for some of the people involved to even know whether they were victims," and stressed that it would also be difficult to establish whether principals named by the Times, including various doctors, lawyers and employees of the Mexican consulate, actually knew what was going on or were "duped into believing they were helping."

Asked whether the county could be held responsible for the victimization of accident clients because they were "county wards while in hospital," Busch said this would be "a difficult question to answer." However, he added, "I'm sure that's a question that a lot of lawyers might want to jump on."

Sailor pleads guilty to assault charge

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

A powerfully built 63-year-old merchant seaman known to Westside acquaintances as the "Mad Russian" Friday pleaded guilty in Long Beach Superior Court to assault with a deadly weapon stemming from a dispute with a liquor clerk.

Konstantine Victor Bobekovich, of 1194 Loma Vista Drive, entered the plea before Judge Elsworth Beam who set probation report hearing and sentencing for April 22 when a remaining charge of armed robbery in the same case will be resolved.

Bobekovich was confined in sheriff's custody in lieu of $3,500 bail.

Bobekovich, who insists he still retains a lieutenantancy in the Imperial Russian Army, was charged with threatening a liquor clerk with a .22-caliber pistol Jan. 4 at Big John's Liquor Store, 949 Daisy Ave.

The clerk told police Bobekovich refused to pay for a $127 liquor selection after ordering the clerk to charge half the purchase price to the store's owner.

THE clerk said that when he refused, Bobekovich tried to take back a check he had offered for the balance of the bill, then proceeded to smash a display of liquor bottles while brandishing the pistol.

Investigators said that bullets for the pistol were loosely wrapped around the outside of the gun with cellophane tape.

Bobekovich's subdued demeanor Friday was in marked contrast to his

Jan. 9 arraignment before Municipal Judge Charles Litwin when, flanked by six of the burliest policemen Long Beach could muster, Bobekovich insisted he was being framed and demanded immediate freedom.

The officers did not interfere as Bobekovich shouted insults at the audience. At one point, Bobekovich ordered Deputy Public Defender Thomas Reitano to immediately get a haircut. "He's a nice boy, your honor, but he'd look better if he cut all that off," Bobekovich said of Reitano, who wears his hair just above the shoulders and sports an eccentric moustache.

Forewarned, six sheriff's deputies accompanied Bobekovich to his Feb. 1 arraignment before Beam but the precautions of shackling the defendant hand and foot seemed unnecessary. Bobekovich remained as quiet at that hearing as he did Friday.

Acquaintances and police patrolmen, who asked not to be identified, said Bobekovich earned a reputation as a respected brawler years ago when he would clear the house at the rougher Westside bars.

One muscular patrolman said he once tried to subdue Bobekovich during a brawl by clouting him on the back of the head with a riot baton swung with both hands.

"He just looked around and asked, 'What you do that for?'" the patrolman said.

Thrift and loan

I frequently see advertisements for investments in thrift and loan firms that offer higher interest rates than banks and savings and loan associations do. What is a thrift and loan company and are their accounts insured? Is the money invested differently and is the risk greater? G.J. Lakewood.

Thrift and loan firms basically are finance companies; they lend a depositor's money to someone else and pay interest for the use of the money. Banks and savings and loan associations do the same thing, but savings accounts at thrift and loan firms are not federally insured. By state law, however, thrift and loan companies must belong to the Thrift Guarantee Corp. of California, a private, nongovernment association. This corporation collects a fee from each member company to insure its accounts up to $10,000 each, according to a spokesman for the California Department of Corporations, which regulates the firms. Because the thrift and loan industry is self-insured, the spokesman conceded there may be more risk involved than with banks and savings and loans. For this reason, state law prohibits such firms from using the term "savings" in their advertisements and they must refer to depositors' accounts as investments.

Claim

My ex-husband, the father of my four children, had surgery in the Long Beach Veterans Administration Hospital last fall for service-connected injuries. When he was released, he was declared 60 per cent disabled and given a pension. He can't work and isn't able to pay child support. Can ACTION LINE please find out if my children, who are ages 11 to 17, are entitled to VA benefits as dependents of a disabled veteran? I've written the VA but haven't been able to find out if they are eligible. K.E.H., Lakewood.

The VA has denied your claim. A VA spokesman said your former husband's compensation is based at the 20 per cent disability rate and he's not getting any additional benefits for dependents. He said your claim was rejected because if they took part of the father's benefits for the children it would "place a hardship on him without providing any substantial benefits" for his dependents. The spokesman said the VA will write you a letter of explanation.

Win the battle?

Our band, the "J.J. Hooker" group, played in the Battle of the Bands dance contest in the Long Beach Auditorium Jan. 25 and won first place, qualifying us for a $1,000 cash prize. Richard W. Eastman and John J. Helton, promoters of the contest, gave us a promissory note saying we would be paid no later than Jan. 30. We haven't been able to collect the money and we can't find Eastman. We talked to Helton, who owns a parking lot downtown, but got no results. Can you help us? J.J.S., Bellflower.

There doesn't appear to be much chance you will get your money anytime soon. We contacted Helton who told us he and Eastman had no money left to pay you after they paid the concert expenses. He said they spent the $4,000 put up by backers — who got no money in return for their investment — for expenses incurred prior to the contest and almost all of the gate receipts were used to pay expenses at the auditorium. He said they thought they would be able to pay you when they signed your note but they hadn't realized the auditorium fees would be as high as they were. Helton said he intends to pay you and "will take care of it as the money comes in" from his parking lot business or from other show business ventures he and Eastman want to promote.

REACTION

I chuckled at the letter written by a substitute teacher saying that substitutes in the Long Beach Unified School District need a raise. Has she looked at the wages of the teachers' aides in Long Beach lately? Eight years ago when the program started, aides were paid $2.18 an hour. Now, with the cost of living having risen more than 20 per cent in the interim, we have received a 2 cent raise, bringing us to $2.20 an hour. Salaries in other districts range from $2.89 to $3.43 an hour. This means some aides in other districts are getting more than $20 a week more than we are. This money means a great deal to those of us struggling through school where we are required to take at least 12 units to keep our jobs. Long Beach teachers are among the best paid in the nation; why then are auxiliary personnel the worst paid? We have asked for 65 cents an hour more. We believe this is justified. L.O., Long Beach.

ROSE MARY WOODS, with her attorney Charles Rhyne at her side, leaves the Capitol Friday after testifying before the Senate Watergate committee.

Rose Mary lawyer raps 'harassment' by panel

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rose Mary Woods, President Nixon's personal secretary, testified under oath before the Senate Watergate Committee Friday and her lawyer called the session "general harassment."

Miss Woods testified for more than four hours, but her testimony was not released officially. Only senators and staff members were permitted in the Capitol hearing room.

One senator said, however, that questioning went beyond Miss Woods' knowledge of the $100,000 given by representatives of billionaire Howard Hughes to C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo, the President's close personal friend. Rebozo has said the money was for Nixon's 1972 campaign.

The senator said questions also touched on the controversy over presidential tape recordings and events in the 1972 re-election campaign.

Charles Rhyne, Miss Woods' attorney, told reporters after the session that his client answered all the questions put to her.

"She went through the same thing before, the same questions and the same answers," Rhyne shouted as he and Miss Woods were hustled into a waiting car by uniformed policemen.

Rebozo completed two days and more than 13 hours of testimony before the committee late Thursday.

Meanwhile, it was reported by sources close to the committee that the panel also took sworn testimony Friday from Herbert Kalmbach, once a prime Nixon campaign fund-raiser and the President's personal attorney.

Kalmbach pleaded guilty earlier this year to two violations of federal campaign laws.

The committee has canceled further public hearings that had been scheduled into the Hughes-Rebozo money and into allegations that Nixon administration policy decisions favorable to the milk industry were preconditioned by large donations from the dairy lobby.

Sources have said, however, that the committee appears likely to call in private and under oath most of the major witnesses that would have been heard in public sessions.

Post, Time, N.Y. Times, networks cited

Distorted Nixon coverage charged

By Don McLeod

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House official said Friday the Washington Post, Time magazine, a New York Times book and the television networks have committed specific acts of the type President Nixon has called distorted coverage.

Bruce Herschensohn, deputy special assistant to the President, noted that Nixon declined to give specifics when asked about his attacks on the media in a Houston news conference Tuesday.

In a speech to the Eastern Communications Association, Herschensohn said it would be improper for the President to get into arguments over specific items of news coverage "but there's no reason why I can't."

THEN, Herschensohn gave as his first example of alleged distorted reporting the printing by the Post last July 29 of two pages from the daily news summaries prepared for Nixon.

By running only the first two pages, which Herschensohn said were an index to the rest of the summary, he said the Post ignored the rest of the 45-page summary and gave the impression that Nixon received only a sketchy report of the news.

"That, I would have to say, was deliberate distortion," Herschensohn said. "No one would have done it that way if he hadn't wanted to give that impression."

Howard Simons, managing editor of the Post, said the paper had no intention of distorting the news or implying Nixon did not get enough news.

"IT WAS simply an attempt to give a flavor of what the news summaries prepared for the President look like," Simons said. "It was clearly labeled and said the summary does not include New York and Washington papers which are delivered to the President daily.

"It said these are the first two pages of the summary and clearly indicates that there was more," Simons said.

Herschensohn also attacked the New York Times' paperback book on the Senate Watergate hearings, which included highlights of testimony from the witnesses.

By cutting off the testimony with that of Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt on Sept. 24-25, 1973, and not including the testimony on Sept. 26 by White House speech writer Patrick Buchanan, Herschensohn said, the book failed to include the testimony most favorable to the administration.

Herschensohn also said CBS, the Post, ABC and Time all had labeled former White House appointments secretary Dwight L. Chapin as a "Watergate man" at one time or another "when he had nothing to do with Watergate."

Chapin has been indicted on four counts charging he lied to a grand jury looking into dirty tricks in the 1972 presidential election. He pleaded innocent and is scheduled for trial next month.

Don Wilson, a spokesman for Time, claimed Herschensohn's accusation against the magazine was "inaccurate and misleading."

Herschensohn said NBC distorted the public's impression of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's news conference on the U.S. alert during the October Mideast crisis.

During the news conference four questions were asked on the point of whether the crisis was emergency or a subterfuge to take public attention off Watergate. Herschensohn said NBC ran all four of these questions and thereby gave them more weight than numerous other questions more directly on the Middle East issue.

NBC had no immediate comment.

Herschensohn also criticized CBS for leading its evening newscast last Monday with a Watergate story about the grand jury's Nixon report being ordered delivered to the House Judiciary Committee, which is studying impeachment of the President.

Herschensohn said the newscast should have been led with news of the Arab oil embargo being ended that day, which he said was more important as well as more favorable to Nixon.

A CBS spokesman said, "In our news judgment, that was the most pertinent news story" of the day. He noted that there had been speculation for a week about the expected end of the embargo and many related stories had run the weekend before it was lifted.

Long says Nixon tax return no basis for stepping down

By William L. Chaze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the congressional panel studying President Nixon's tax returns said Friday he has seen nothing that would prompt Nixon to resign.

Long said he disagreed with a statement by the panel's vice-chairman, Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., that taxes would be more of an influence on a possible resignation than Watergate disclosures.

"Based on what we have, I don't see why that should be the case," said Long. "I just don't agree with Chairman Mills about that particular matter."

MILLS said he was not accusing Nixon of tax fraud, but that he expected Nixon to be out of office, one way or another, by the November elections. He did not predict great new disclosures in the tax matter, but said the public has a better understanding of taxes than Watergate.

Long said that, based on the evidence he has seen, he could not vote to impeach the President. He said he knows of no proof that the President has committed any crime.

The senator said he could not vote to impeach the President for anything other than a "serious crime."

In Little Rock, Mills said Friday that he had not asked Nixon to resign now because he wasn't sure Nixon had done anything wrong.

Asked if he regretted his earlier remarks, Mills said, "I never regret anything I say in response to a question. Maybe I'd be better off if I didn't always level with everybody who asks me a question, just say I don't know, but I've never done that."

MILLS said that in his March 8 statement he merely wanted to say that "as between impeachment and the President resigning, I think the latter would be better for the country as a whole."

"It would be much better, I think, for the President, under the circumstances, if it comes to that, to go on and resign," Mills said. "I have not suggested that he resign now because I have not reached a conclusion in my own mind as to whether or not there's been anything like any wrongdoing."

"We've found no evidence of it, certainly by him, in connection with his tax returns," Mills said. "It's possible for a taxpayer to make mistakes in taking deductions that are not truly justified under the law about which there is some question, perhaps, in the minds of accountants and lawyers. This may be what he's done; I don't know."

Concerning a comment by a White House spokesman that Mills' recent statements on Nixon's income tax troubles were a dirty political ploy, Mills laughed and said, "Someone, I guess, lost his temper a little bit. We're going to be very factual in our report."

U.S. spending on Nixon homes estimates rise

By PHILIP SHABECOFF
New York Times Service
WASHINGTON—The tally of government spending associated with President Nixon's private estates in California and Florida is likely to be even higher than the $17 million reported Thursday by the House Government Activities subcommittee, officials on Capitol Hill said Friday.
The report, approved by the subcommittee Thursday over the strong objections of its Republican minority, asserted that personnel costs added $7 million to the total of $10 million previously reported as the total government expenditures on security and support for Nixon in and around his private residences in San Clemente and Key Biscayne.
The White House Friday attacked the report as distorted and misleading although it did not dispute the $17-million figure.

IN FACT, according to the Capitol Hill officials, investigations now being conducted by two other congressional committees are producing evidence that may show that the total spending related to the President's use of his private estates is higher than the $17 million.

EXCLUSIVE
N.Y. TIMES SERVICE

The two bodies are the House Judiciary Committee, which is deliberating the possible impeachment of the President, and the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, which is investigating Nixon's personal taxes. Both reportedly are looking into matters related to the finances of the San Clemente and Key Biscayne homes that have not been touched on in the report by the government activities subcommittee.

One such matter is the "special projects fund" of $1.5 million appropriated each year for the White House and used by the President at his own discretion. The fund became a matter of controversy when it was alleged that some of the money from this fund was used to finance activities of the "plumbers unit," the clandestine White House security force, and this year the fund is not included in the administration's budget request for fiscal year 1975. However, at least one of the congressional committees is reportedly gathering material that allegedly indicates that some of this fund was used to defray expenses incurred at the President's private residences.

THE WHITE HOUSE has declined to disclose how the special fund has been used.

Another matter being looked into with regard to spending involving the President's private retreats is a secret "military fund" expended by the White House military aide at the discretion of the President. This is said to be a "blind" fund set up by the Office of Management and Budget in the name of the Department of Defense but used by and for the White House. According to congressional sources, the Defense Department is not even told how much money is in the fund, much less how it is spent.

This line of investigation reportedly is concerned with the role of White House military aides in the planning and operations at the two estates. It was not disclosed whether any links had been established between the secret fund and actual expenditures.

The government activities subcommittee report has been sent to the full Government Operations Committee for approval. The chairman of the subcommittee, Rep. Jack Brooks, mentioned the $17-million figure in a statement Thursday prior to the vote on the report.

AT THE White House, Gerald L. Warren, deputy press secretary, said it was wrong for Brooks to have claimed that $17 million were spent on the President's homes when, in fact, a report by the General Accounting Office, indicated that the spending on the homes was under a million dollars. The White House also severely criticized the news media for reporting the $17 million as expenditures on the President's homes.

The ranking Republican on the House subcommittee, John Buchanan of Alabama, called a news conference Friday morning to attack the report as a "total distortion" of the facts.

Buchanan said that "only" $205,000 was spent on the two homes and a little over $1 million was spent on the surrounding property owned by the President at the two estates.

Neither Warren nor Buchanan disputed the $17 million total figure. They claimed that the number was used out of context for partisan reasons. The money was spent on security and support of the President and did not in any way enrich Nixon, they said.

Brooks issued a statement Thursday saying that every assertion in the subcommittee report had been thoroughly documented.

Nixon kin to retire from Marriott firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's younger brother is taking an "early retirement" next month as a vice president of the Marriott Corp., a company spokesman said Friday.

A terse announcement, which said the company would not respond to questions, announced that F. Donald Nixon, who joined the company in 1970 as a vice president for community and industry relations, "has been in ill health in recent months. In addition Marriott Corp. has embarked on an austerity program caused by the energy crisis."

The announcement said that last January Nixon and J. W. Marriott Jr., decided Nixon would stay with the company until April 15, "at which time he will take early retirement."

NIXON WILL continue to serve until Jan. 31 as consultant to the company, the announcement said. The younger Nixon was mentioned recently in a report by columnist Jack Anderson that a California builder seeking a federal contract in 1971 made a $100,000 personal loan to him.

Anderson wrote that the contractor's firm later got a subcontract for more than $4 million to build homes at 18 Air Force bases. But Anderson said the current head of the firm denied that Donald Nixon had anything to do with the contract.
Anderson said it was the second major loan Donald Nixon obtained from government contractors. He noted that in 1956 Nixon got a $50,000 loan from billionaire Howard Hughes, then involved with defense work.
The Washington Post reported in 1973 that the President ordered the Secret Service to wiretap his younger brother's telephone during his first term because he feared that Donald's financial activities might embarrass the Nixon administration.

Bernardine Dohrn—her parents want her home

SUN CITY, Fla. (AP) — It has been four years since Bernard Dohrn and his wife last heard from their daughter, but they never give up hope that one day she will come home.

Bernardine Dohrn, 32, described by the FBI as "the leader of the violence-oriented Weatherman faction of Students for a Democratic Society," disappeared after being named to the agency's 10 Most Wanted list in 1970.

"I HAVE no idea where she is," said Dohrn as he sits in a rocking chair at his home in this retirement community 25 miles south of Tampa. "She told us she wouldn't get us involved, and she kept her promise."

Dohrn, 69, and his wife

Dorothy moved here five years ago from Chicago where Dohrn was a credit manager for a chain of appliance stores.

Miss Dohrn's named was removed from the Most Wanted list last October after the government dropped indictments against her and 14 others in an alleged Flint, Mich., bombing conspiracy.

But she is still wanted on federal warrants charging unlawful flight to avoid prosecution in connection with a 1969 Weatherman clash with police in Chicago.

"You don't get used to it. The hurt doesn't wear off," says Dohrn. "I hope someday she'll be home. These are our golden years, and certainly we should be able to enjoy our children."

THE DOHRNS have been reunited with their other daughter. 29-year-old Jennifer.

Jennifer was active in the Youth International Party — Yippies — and once appeared at a news conference in Lebanon with LSD advocate Timothy Leary.

When she returned to New York, Miss Dohrn announced she had a taped message from Leary calling on U.S. revolutionaries to "turn on" and keep up the bombing.

Dohrn says that Jennifer, recently married and living in New York, was not seriously involved in the revolutionary movement because she knew that he and his wife were upset about Bernardine.

HE CANNOT explain why Bernardine was attracted to the revolutionary movement but guesses it was the climate of the times.

"It's going to die itself down," Dohrn says, and Bernardine will be home.

"A lot of people with all those youngsters who went up to Canada have the same problem," he adds. "Maybe someday there will be amnesty, and they can come home."

Sparked by Hearst case

FBI expecting kidnap wave

By AL EISELE
Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Federal law enforcement officials are braced for a wave of kidnappings of prominent persons for ransom in the coming months. FBI Director Clarence Kelley indicated Friday.

Kelley said in an interview that the still-unresolved Feb. 4 kidnapping of Patty Hearst in California has apparently touched off an unprecedented "rash of kidnappings" for ransom and extortion purposes.

Noting that there have been 10 kidnappings involving ransom demands totaling almost $1.5 million since the Hearst kidnapping, Kelley declared, "at first, I said I didn't think this would start a trend, but apparently it did."

KELLEY, who reversed himself after saying several times in recent weeks that he doesn't think the U.S. is going to have a wave of kidnappings, pointed out that the FBI has solved all 10 of the kidnap cases since the Hearst abduction and recovered most of the ransom that was paid.

"I hope you will give some publicity to the solutions of these cases," Kelley said. "We of course want to deter these as much as possible through publicity."

While none of the subsequent kidnappings was "politically oriented" as was the Hearst case, "they were kidnapping and there's just too many of them," Kelley said.

Kelley added that he hopes to convince would-be kidnappers that they cannot view kidnapping as "a chance to get some easy money" and "it's not a good business to enter."

We want to stem the tide if at all possible."

Kelley said the FBI has consulted numerous prominent persons, including bankers and newspaper executives, about steps to prevent kidnap attempts but has not yet "embarked on any particular program" of that nature.

KELLEY, an ex-FBI agent who was chief of police in Kansas City, Mo., when named to succeed L. Patrick Gray as FBI director in July, 1973, indicated that the FBI is not any closer to solving the Hearst case.

He said the bureau is in "close and frequent contact" with the kidnap victim's father, San Francisco newspaper publisher Randolph Hearst, but added, "very frankly, we are guided by what his desires are."

He explained that "we give him the benefit of our observations from time to time when we feel it's judicious" but do not attempt to tell him what he should do.

Asked if he feels Congress should pass a law prohibiting the payment of ransom to kidnappers, Kelley indicated he would oppose such a law because it might endanger the safety of the victim and discourage reporting of kidnappings.

However, Kelley voiced his support for restoring the death penalty for convicted kidnappers. "I have said before and I reiterate that I think this would be an effective deterrent... until a better means of deterrent is devised."

Asked whether there is any evidence to back up reports that Miss Hearst might have cooperated with the Symbionese Liberation Army to carry out her kidnapping, Kelley said, "I have no information to indicate."

Referring to the latest kidnapping for ransom, Kelley said that all but about $100 of the $200,000 ransom paid for Mrs. Eunice Kronholm, wife of a South St. Paul banker, has now been recovered.

Mrs. Kronholm was abducted on March 15 and released three days later. Two persons were arrested and charged with the kidnapping the same day.

Kelley supplied a list of the other kidnappings since the Hearst abduction and their disposition. They include the Feb. 20 kidnap-ing of Atlanta newspaper editor Reg Murphy, with the $700,000 ransom recovered and two persons arrested, and the March 14 abduction of Mrs. Nina Jane Scruby, wife of an Evergreen, Colo., banker. Two persons were arrested before the $200,000 ransom was paid.

In two of the cases listed as solved, suspects are still being sought and a total of about $50,000 in ransom has not yet been recovered, although in both cases, the kidnap victims were released unharmed.

Hearst food giveaway resuming

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The head of Randolph Hearst's $2 million food giveaway said Friday work is moving along smoothly toward a resumption of the program next week to meet demands of Patricia Hearst's kidnappers.

"We've got the assembly lines, we've got the trucks," said A. Ludlow Kramer. "We're simply putting all the pieces together. When we get them together, we'll go."

Hearst said earlier this week that he hoped the program could resume on Monday in its revamped form, changed after the Symbionese Liberation Army kidnappers sharply criticized it nearly two weeks ago.

Asked if the program would be able to meet Hearst's Monday date, Kramer said it looked like it would be ready "the first part of the week."

Meanwhile, a former leader of the Philippine Huk guerrilla movement, speaking as "one revolutionary to another" asked Patricia's kidnappers to free her.

The appeal came from Luis M. Taruc, 60, who led the Huk rebellion against the Philippine government for many years.

Taruc appeared late Thursday at the office of the Berkeley Gazette to issue a statement calling for the freedom of Patricia, 20, who was kidnapped by the terrorist SLA Feb. 4.

"Kidnaping for ransom, senseless violence, deliberate capture, detention and torture, and wanton killings of innocent persons have been proven to be the most self-defeating acts of so-called liberation movements anywhere in the world."

"But, even as I take exception to SLA methods, you have delivered a message. And, I believe,

Maheu, Greenspun deal alleged

United Press International

An attorney for Howard Hughes charged Friday that Robert Maheu led the billionaire into financial deals with Las Vegas newspaper publisher Hank Greenspun from which Maheu profited.

Norbert Schleier, representing Hughes' interests at Maheu's $17.3 million libel suit against the mysterious recluse, made the statements in an outline of the next phase of the trial in federal court.

Schleier claimed that Maheu received $150,000 from Greenspun, marked as a loan, in March, 1968. Schleier said the loan was dated one day after Greenspun sold television station KLAS to Hughes for $3,650,000.

Greenspun, editor and publisher of the Las Vegas Sun, was in the courtroom but time did not permit his testifying Friday. He is expected to take the witness stand next week to tell the jury about his dealings with Maheu and Hughes.

Maheu's attorney, Morton Galante, replied to the implication that the loan was a "kickback" by accusing Schleier of giving an inaccurate date for the TV station deal, thereby improperly linking it to the $150,000 loan from Greenspun to Maheu.

Schleier also charged that Greenspun received a $500,000 advance on future advertising from Hughes Tool Co. in August, 1967, to cover newspaper advertising by Las Vegas "strip" hotels Hughes was acquiring.

Schleier said that in addition to the television station Hughes bought the Paradise Valley Country Club from Greenspun for $4,250,000 in May, 1969, with Maheu participating, even from the capitalists has come a deeper realization of the fundamental need which has been ignored by the affluent society: that all men are created equal and that they must love one another, live and work together while sharing together God's blessing as one holy family."

Taruc, cofounder of the Socialist Party of the Philippines, led a coalition of Socialists and Communists in 1948 and spent 15 years in the Luzon mountains battling the government. He later spent nearly 15 years in jail. He lectured Thursday at the University of California, where the kidnaped girl was a student when she was kidnapped from her Berkeley apartment 46 days ago.

Cancers tied to chemicals

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. — We live in an expanding sea of chemicals that may cause human cancers, two scientists said Friday in calling for new efforts to identify and avoid such risks.

They noted a World Health Organization estimate that about 85 per cent of all cancer "is derived from environmental sources."

"Our world is changing, and, especially in the past 40 years, the environment in which we live has been altered to an extraordinary extent," said Drs. E. Cuyler Hammond and Irving Selikoff.

"The air we breathe contains gasses and particles that never before entered the human lung. Our food has chemicals designed to improve its taste, freshness, appearance — but which are strange to our intestines, livers, kidneys, blood. We touch, ingest, inhale, absorb an ever-increasing number of synthetic materials and, in other circumstances, agents which have existed on earth but were never part of the immediate human environment."

Hammond, vice president for epidemiology and statistics of the American Cancer Society, and Selikoff, professor of medicine and community medicine at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City, head the society's new Environmental Cancer Research Project.

Recent reports of some fatal cases of liver cancer among workers in chemical plants using vinyl chloride are an example of the kind of threat that can long go undetected, they told the American Cancer Society's seminar for science writers.

"Cancers we are seeing now had their origin 15 to 35 years ago. And cancer agents being newly introduced into our environment will not show their effect for decades. Prevention of cancer in the year 2000 is the order of the day in 1974."

"There has been and continues to be no protesting of materials for cancer or other serious disease. Examination is for serviceability, saleability, utility. Whether cancer will result is hardly considered, except for radioactive devices."

The dangers associated with vinyl chloride, used as a base for some plastics and a propellant in pressurized cans, call for expanded investigation, Hammond and Selikoff said.

Besides workers in direct contact with vinyl chloride, how much are other persons exposed to possible dangers, they asked. Will workers in secondary factories using the materials for molding or mixing or other operations have significant exposure? Will the families of those workers be affected by materials brought home by workers on their clothing?

"There is no evidence at present that disease will occur in such circumstances since the questions have only now been raised. Obviously, the answers must be sought as rapidly as possible."

By lowering the 'human thermostat'

Drug may extend man's lifetime

EAST LANSING (UPI) — A Michigan State University research team said Friday it may have discovered a drug which might lead to prolonged human life—possibly even to 200 years.

If current experiments are successful, the drug could be used to "switch off the human thermostat" so that the body temperature could be lowered and the aging process slowed dramatically, the researchers said.

"IF OUR theories are correct, then we could speculate on a life span of even 200 years," Dr. Barnett Rosenberg, a leader of the research team, said.

Experiments at MSU carried out on lower creatures such as flies have already shown that they live longer if their body temperatures are lowered, he said.

Armed with the thermostat-stopping drug, the MSU team will now start preliminary experiments on mice and rats to determine if the results on flies check out with higher animals.

If the tests prove successful, the drug could be tested on humans within 10 years.

Rosenberg, a professor of biophysics, told UPI, "It is time the public became aware of the implications of such preliminary studies of aging."

"THE relationship of the raising and lowering of temperature with the lengthening and shortening of the life of insects is sufficiently significant for tests to be done on much higher animals."

Rosenberg said the drug used to "switch off the thermostat" is not new—but the application is new. He declined to name the drug.

Rosenberg, a co-leader of the project with Dr. Garbor Kemeny, said, "We know from thermodynamics that the aging and death processes are very temperature dependent. By slowing down the aging rate, you slow down the onset of age related diseases."

"Longer life spans are inevitable...it's coming because people want to live longer."

He said that, in theory, the aging process could be slowed dramatically by reducing the body temperature from 98.6 degrees to about 86 degrees.

"Just small changes in temperatures can produce tremendous changes in life expectancy and aging," Rosenberg said.

"If such temperature-aging relationships hold true for humans, it may be possible by lowering the temperature just a few degrees to prolong life by some 20 years. And that is longer than could be accomplished by curing the three major killers, vascular lesions, cancer and heart disease."

Boy on 'feet' after surgery for cancer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Thirteen-year-old Stephen Southerland stood up for a few moments Friday in the first test of an artificial leg he received after cancer surgery.

A physician at Children's Hospital said the youth put some of his weight on the temporary limb. The physician said Stephen will continue to do this twice a day, gradually increasing the amount of weight placed on the limb.

He will be fitted with a permanent artificial leg within a few weeks, the physician said.

The hospital said the Miami youth, whose left leg was removed three inches below the hip joint Thursday, continued to be listed in satisfactory condition.

"As expected, he's in severe post-operative pain," the hospital said. Stephen's physicians and his parents said the boy would not be available for interviews until sometime next week.

The New York Yankees, in training at Fort Lauderdale, said the team will donate the net proceeds from a Sunday exhibition game with the Chicago White Sox to help pay Stephen's medical bills.

Stephen is the third of three sons of Raymond and Sara Southerland to suffer from a rare form of cancer. His brother Jeffrey died at the age of four of lymphatic leukemia. The surgeon who directed the operation on Stephen also performed two successful operations on his brother Michael, now 9.

Michael had a rare malignancy of the nerve lining of the spine but has been free of symptoms for two years.

After the 3½-hour operation Thursday, during which Stephen was fitted with an artificial limb, the surgeon said there was no evidence the cancer had spread elsewhere in the body and it appeared the entire tumor had been removed.

No radiation therapy is planned at this time, but chemotherapy will begin at a later date.

The hospital said on Friday that Stephen will not be released until his response to the chemical treatment is studied. Chemotherapy will be used in an attempt to keep the cancer from recurring.

Residents of Florida have begun drives to raise funds for the Southerlands. And a hospital spokesman here said "We've had quite a few calls from people who want to donate money to the family."

Stephen's father, Raymond, 35, is a community relations officer with the Dade County, Fla., police department. He and his wife, Sara, 34, have been with Stephen since he entered the hospital last week.

Nun says Vatican 'back at ranch'

Ordination of women is a natural step, says Sister Dorothy Donnelly of the Jesuit School of Theology of Berkeley, and she described herself as very disappointed that the Vatican Commission on Women in the Church and Society had failed to discuss the subject at its meeting in Rome recently.

The president of the National Coalition of American Nuns said in a story in the National Catholic Reporter that "women are among those on the front lines of ministry. Meanwhile, the sacramental system is back at the ranch." She said the Holy Spirit is calling women, giving them the gifts of ministry and "the task of the church is to confirm the gifts, not to suppress them."

Briefly ...

On scriptural streaking, reverse $$s, Feisal oil

By LES RODNEY

"It's all in the Bible," the old saying goes, and it was just a matter of time before someone came up with a reference to streaking, as someone did for Watergate.

Reader E. C. Shaw of Long Beach reports that his (her?) minister, Joe Reed, said last Sunday that it all started in biblical times, citing Mark 14:51,52, which reads (KJ): "And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body; and the young men laid hold on him. And he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked."

HERE'S SOMETHING new under the sun. Some Southeast Asia churches have sent financial aid to a couple of poor churches in the United States! A reverse twist indeed.

The sum of $1,000 was sent by the Singapore district of the Chinese Methodist Conference to a low income, Spanish-speaking congregation at Grand Prairie, Tex., the Mid Cities United Methodist Church, and to an American Indian congregation near Schuler, Okla., Little Cussetah Church. Both are working to raise money for much needed buildings.

Rev. Dr. Howard Brington of the United Methodist Board of Global Ministries says it is probably the first time in the denomination for overseas churches to send money to U.S. churches. He feels

'Seminex' bigger than Concordia

Concordia Seminary in Excite, called Seminex, opened its spring quarter with 385 students registered. This is 300 more than registered at Concordia Seminary itself. Seminex came into being when the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod fired the president, and subsequently the majority of the faculty who supported him.

Seminex' enrollment makes it the second largest Lutheran seminary in the world. Only Luther Seminary in St. Paul is larger.

the modest transaction symbolizes the international partnership that has developed between churches, replacing the dominating paternal role of U.S. missions.

GLEN RINARD, pastor of Long Beach First Friends Church, has been named George Fox College's 1974 Southern California Alumnae of the Year. Rinard, a 1929 graduate of the Oregon school, has been clerk of the California organization since 1967. All three of his sons are also George Fox graduates.

DEMOGOGUERY is one of the kinder words one could use for Saudi Arabia's King Feisal's statement that he will not rest until he can worship freely in Al Aksa Mosque in Jerusalem.

There is nothing to prevent him from worshipping at any mosque in Jerusalem—all he has to do is take off his shoes.

Since 1967, when Israel reunified the city, free access to all the holy places of all religions has been guaranteed, which was not the case before. Every Friday, thousands of Moslems worship at Al Aksa. Every Saturday, thousands of Jews pray at the Western Wall. Every Sunday, thousands of Christians worship at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre—which is now undergoing extensive repair and restoration, under the supervision of church authorities, paid for by the government of Israel.

This religious freedom is in sharp contrast to the years 1949 to 1967, when Jordan ruled the Old City of Jerusalem and violated the commitments in the 1949 U.N. armistice agreement. Christians living in or visiting Israel were denied the right to worship in the churches or visit the holy places, except at Christmas. Moslems living in Israel could not worship at the wall or visit the 2,500-year-old cemetery on Mount of Olives. During all this time the U.N. was mute, which helps explain the low esteem Israelis hold for that sometimes useful organization.

VERA WILLIAMS, retired staff member of these newspapers, has a typically well told story in the April issue of Guideposts, the magazine published by Norman Vincent Peale and his wife Ruth. The story, "Prairie Fire," goes back to Vera's girlhood in the Nebraska sandhills.

WILL DEFECTIONS from the Armistice? Worldwide Church of God create some financial problems? The new concert auditorium at the church-run Ambassador College of Pasadena, due to open next month, is not exactly inexpensive. It contains the largest installation of Turkish and Persian onyx in the world, 26 quartz pillars each 72 feet tall, verde granite exterior walls, Brazilian rosewood paneling, silk drapery, deep violet carpeting and crystal chandeliers. For the opening, the Viennese Symphony Orchestra is being flown in from Europe, at the church's expense.

With a membership required to pay second and third tithes, the church in 1973 had an income of $53 million. Yet in 1972, one of the dissident ministers notes, the senior Armstrong told followers that a "desperate financial crisis" faced the church and asked them "even to go to your bank and borrow what you can."

MEMBERS OF the youth confirmation class of St. Luke's Episcopal paid a one hour visit to Rt. Rev. Robert B. Gooden, 99, in his Glendale home. The young people grouped around him in a living room filled with pictures and momentos of a ministry which includes rector of St. Luke's from 1907 to 1912. They had an enjoyable chat, recorded on film and sound tape. Then the bishop insisted on seeing the 15 visitors outside to their bus.

Spotlight Award church youth

Charismatic teen gives spirit to her church

By LES RODNEY

Can an 18-year-old girl bubbling over with the charismatic-type fervor of the Holy Spirit within her find happiness in the institutional "mainline" church?

Sue Anne Edwards, who identifies strongly with the Jesus People emphasis on dramatic personal spiritual experience and the immediate "gifts of the Spirit," is a highly valued member of Lakewood First United Presbyterian Church. She was the recipient last month of the Long Beach Area Council of Churches Spotlight Award as church youth of the year. And may suggest that label stereotyping can be as misleading in religion as in politics.

Daughter of a former minister, a Millikan High grad and student at Long Beach City College, pretty blue-eyed Sue Anne holds down a job as elementary school aide in Signal Hill. "It's a great, open type classroom," she enthuses. "I've just got the feeling I want to be a teacher, that will be part of my ministry."

SHE ALSO teaches in the church Sunday School, helps direct vacation Bible school, works closely with the church junior-high age kids, and spent her Christmas vacation on a 1,000-mile evangelistic trip through Baja with her brother Gary, who is 20. It all falls together as part of an integrated life pattern for her.

"You can't live a Christian witness until Christ is alive within you," she said earnestly this week in an interview chat.

On a questionnaire which she recently filled out for possible future Latin American mission work, Sue Anne wrote: "The Holy Spirit began living within me almost three years ago, when I asked God to become real to me through Jesus."

She names modern dance high on her list of hobbies, calls it her expressive outlet and teaches it to the junior high youngsters as a means of expressing faith. Like everything else she does and feels, dance is viewed through the all-encompassing focus of witness.

"Dancing by itself is that evangelists on campus can be self righteous and obnoxious, as in but-tionholing a stranger and demanding "Are you a Christian?" and "Have you been saved?"

Sue Anne nodded to indicate appreciation of the point.

"Listening, that's the thing. Listening is Christian. Hearing peoples' needs, then helping to meet them, through Christ. Students feel society isn't giving them the answers."

"You see," she added, after a moment's thought about the charge of self-righteousness, "I'm weak too. That's why we all need God."

Asked if she felt she had all the answers, she shook her head negatively.

Christian humility, in fact, is one of the things she admires in her pastor at First Presbyterian. "He isn't afraid to humble himself, he talks about being imperfect, his need for Christ too."

"The Holy Spirit shows us how we need Christ as our own saviour, not just as, well, you know, as somebody far away, the picture on the wall, the statue and all."

DOES SHE find communication between youth and adults all it should be in the church?

"Uh uh. It isn't. And young people often feel they don't get enough out of church." She feels part of her mission, and her responsibility as a First Church member is precisely to infuse the church with more of the right communicative spirit.

For herself, she feels it important to be able to be in a church situation "where I can expose my feelings to adults, after all they are the foundation of the churches, and if they aren't strong..."

"You have to make people feel a part of the church life," Sue Anne continued. "Some people

DOES SHE feel that she carries her witness with her into City College?

Sue Anne barely waited for the conclusion of the question before responding "Oh, yes. In relations with other students, in classrooms, on campus."

What about the feelings some students express

Council of 12

Elder Marvin J. Ashton, member of the Council of Twelve of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will speak this weekend to the Long Beach East Stake Conference on "Home Ideals." Visitors are welcome Sunday, 10 a.m., at Millikan High

Beach, 500 Manhattan Beach Blvd., and next Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Garden Grove Church, 9881 Trask Ave. The public is invited.

come like just out of a responsibility to come to church. You have to show them that each one has a significant gift, even if it's not the same as someone else's. People in the church say 'I can't be like her,' meaning me. They don't all have to. They don't have the same gifts I do."

In the application to the mission group she had written: "The Lord has given me the gift of teaching young children, adolescent teenagers and my peers. I hope I may be called to a mission field in a Spanish-speaking land after having completed my teaching credential. I'm praising Him!"

Her Spanish teachers at Millikan will be happy to hear that she speaks the language fluently, which stood her in good stead in Baja, where she and her brother would play the guitar and sing carols in Spanish to establish rapport in the plazas.

While Sue Anne believes the church must reach horizontally into the world in addition to vertically to God, she shares the conservative evangelical reservations about the church criticizing the government, though not from the "render unto Caesar" point of view.

"Like now," she says, "instead of criticizing the government, it's more important to humble ourselves, to show God we've all been at fault, not just the government, and to pray for healing. We're all sinners in the sight of God."

Has she ever considered going into the ministry?

"I did," was the reply, "but I feel someone shouldn't go into the ministry because she is a woman, to make that point, it has to be a call, man or woman. There's a task force in the church now, on women needing an equal role, and I agree, women have been in the subordinate role. But that shouldn't be the thing that makes one go into the ministry."

Yes, Sue Anne Edwards has a boy friend. He's a Long Beach State student, and, here she broke into a big smile, "No, we're not alike, let's say he kind of complements me in different ways in our faith."

Finally, after an impulsively youthful "I really was neat being interviewed, I mean talking with you about these things," Sue Anne said, "Put the emphasis more on the Lord than on me."

If you mail it Wednesday and we don't get it till Friday (this has been happening), it's too late. We cannot consider for publication any material received after Thursday noon.

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

How to solve a problem

A husband and wife had a grave problem. They had done everything they could think of to solve it and, finally, the husband who called himself a realist gave it up. He went to bed knowing that the next morning in a distant place forces would be set in motion which would close the matter with tragic consequences for them. He tossed fitfully for hours before falling into a troubled sleep.

At five in the morning, he was awakened by his wife. She was standing over him and he seemed to see something different in her face. "I've done something I never did before. I've been praying all night long," she said. "And believe it or not, I've got an answer. I know now what to do."

"I know, honey," he told her patiently, "but it's too late. It's all over. Nothing can be done."

"No," she answered. "I do not accept that. I want you to get out of bed and say a prayer with me."

He did so, more to humor her than anything else. In her sleepless night of prayer a new thought about the problem had crystallized in her mind and she outlined it to him. He wasn't too convinced but agreed to let her try out her idea. She went to the telephone and made a long distance call to that far off town where some other people were involved, offering her new ideas as a solution. Her reception was encouraging. The people seemed surprised and told her: "This is a new angle. We'll call you back."

Husband and wife sat and waited, prayed some more, continuing to wait. Again and again, the wife assured her husband: "Something is happening. Spiritual forces are working on this. The answer is developing. I know it is."

And, at half past nine, sure enough, the telephone rang. There was a new conception of the problem and a new solution. Tragedy was averted. A better situation developed. "Never again will I doubt," the husband told me. "Always hereafter I shall believe that if you keep calm, being willing to be guided creatively, right answers will come."

Whatever your problem — if it can be solved — provided you go at it on some such basis as the foregoing, I have worked out six points that I personally apply in solving problems.

1. Don't panic. Never tense up in the presence of a problem for if you panic you will not be able to think soundly.

2. Don't act overwhelmed by the problem and don't be dramatic about it. There is always a tendency to exaggerate a situation. This can often lead to an attitude of hopelessness.

3. DON'T WASTE time with regrets or past mistakes. Don't ask, "Why did I ever get into this?" Just take it from where you are.

4. Think in terms of solution rather than problem. Go for a solution, not for the whole problem, but for the next step. Take it a step at a time. And, as you do, continually seek for guidance in finding the next step.

5. Always remember to ask yourself this basic question: what is the right thing to do. Do the right thing, and how can you go wrong.

6. And, lastly, never give up. Keep at it. Keep praying, keep believing, keep thinking until the answer comes.

'Praise' author at Municipal Auditorium

Merlin Carothers, once a convict, then a paratrooper and chaplain with the 82nd Airborne, whose books on the dynamics of praise have become best sellers, will speak next Friday and Saturday, Mar. 29 and 30, in Municipal Auditorium.

The book "Prison to Praise" has sold more than a million copies and has been translated into 12 foreign languages.

Carothers' message is that God's people are intended to give Him praise for everything that comes into their lives—good and bad—realizing that God allows nothing that cannot be turned by Him into good and a source of spiritual growth. "Praise," he says, "like spiritual dynamite, has an explosive quality. Released in life, it revolutionizes everything with which it comes in contact."

He can be heard Friday at 7:30 p.m., and Saturday the 30th at 10 a.m., 2 and 7 p.m.

LYDIA LODGE

It's Open House Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. for Lydia Lodge, the new facility of the Long Beach Rescue Mission which takes care of the needs of women and children who for whatever reason find themselves with no place to turn to.

Operating 24 hours a day, since its opening last Christmas Eve Lydia Lodge, at 829 Daisy Ave., has helped 75 women and 37 children.

For bicentennial

Since "Lutherans have been a part of America from before the founding of the Republic, they should undertake to participate in the forthcoming bicentennial observances in ways that will contribute significantly to the nation's self-understanding," members and agencies of the Lutheran Church in America are being advised.

Sunday School circus coming

"Quit Clowning Around, Let's Win This Town for Christ" is the slogan at Bethany Baptist Church for its big March Sunday School campaign.

All those who attend Sunday at 9:30 a.m. get a ticket for the big circus day the following Saturday, March 30th, and an extra ticket for each visitor brought in to class.

On a January day in 1959, a stocky, grey-haired man named Andrija Artukovic settled into a chair at his home in Surfside and reflected on his seven-year battle to escape extradition to his native Yugoslavia.

A U.S. court commissioner in Los Angeles had just ruled that Andrija Artukovic could remain in the United States despite allegations that he had been responsible for the wartime murder of 200,000 Serbs, Jews and Gypsies in the Nazi puppet state of Croatia. And Artukovic was understandably elated over the ruling.

"I do not know how to say what I feel at this hour," said the former Croatian interior minister. "Only in the United States of America could such a case have been held and right been so triumphant."

WITH THE extradition hearing behind him, Artukovic retired to a life of welcome obscurity—something he had sought ever since he arrived in this country in 1947 under an assumed name. Only two or three times in the 15 years that followed the hearing did the spotlight swing his way again—and then only for brief periods.

Since 1967, in fact, when his name came up in connection with an alleged kidnap plot that failed to materialize, little or nothing has been heard about Andrija Artukovic.

Yet the ghost of his Croatian past refuses to die, it seems.

This week Artukovic became the target once again of a deportation demand—this time by a pair of Jewish organizations that insist he be brought to trial for his alleged crime.

To dramatize their demand, the militant Jewish Defense League and the Council for Soviet Jews will conduct an all-night vigil tonight at the Sherman Oaks home of Artukovic's brother, John, a building contractor. Spokesmen for the groups said they would have chosen Artukovic's own home in nearby Surfside, but explained that the seaside community is too private and well-guarded to make it a suitable demonstration site.

WHAT'S MORE, they added, John Artukovic is the man on whom Andrija Artukovic depends for support.

In the meantime, Artukovic could not be reached for comment. Thursday and Friday his phone in Surfside was reported out of service by the telephone company; and his wife, who is supervisor of the data control center at St. Mary Magdalene Center in Long Beach, declined comment.

A call to John Artukovic's home in Sherman Oaks elicited the information that the brother was out of town for several days.

Artukovic, who is now about 75, was the center of a long and emotion-charged battle in the 1950s—a battle that, in its final, confusing configuration, looked like a jigsaw of religious, national and ideological hatreds. There was the familiar strain of Communism versus anti-Communism in it, of course. But there was also the long-standing animosity between Serbs and Croats, and the ancient feud between the Eastern Orthodox wing of Catholicism and the Roman Catholic wing.

ARTUKOVIC was anti-Communist, Croatian and Roman Catholic, and many Catholics in this country rallied to his defense.

Drew Pearson, the late newspaper columnist who went to some lengths to indict Artukovic in his columns, intimated that the Catholicism of the late Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy might have had something to do with the Justice Department's failure to deport Artukovic in the early 1960s.

Artukovic himself claimed that the Tito regime in Yugoslavia was seeking political vengeance in its efforts to try him as a war criminal.

And Artukovic's friends echoed his feelings. "Andrija has been hounded not for a crime, but for his faith," declared Rev. Robert Ross of the Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Westminster.

WHEN Artukovic's name was brought up in the war crime trial of Adolf Eichmann in 1961, the former Croatian minister again denied the charges of mass slaughter.

In Jerusalem, witnesses at the Eichmann trial had described Artukovic as an accomplice of Eichmann.

When U.S. Commissioner Theodore Hocke ruled against Artukovic's extradition in 1959, Hocke said the government of Yugoslavia, which had presented a mass of documents to support its case, had failed to provide evidence that there was reasonable and probable cause to believe Artukovic was guilty of the war crime charge.

Later that year, an immigration officer, in a separate case, granted Artukovic an indefinite stay of execution from a 1952 deportation order. But the hearing officer added that his decision could nevertheless be brought up for reconsideration at a later date.

Baby gets toe stuck in pipe

Sixteen-month-old Ann Marie stuck her toe into a four-inch pipe and caused a county emergency in La Mirada Friday afternoon.

The baby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Charles Wamboldt, 5917 1/2 California Ave., was with her babysitter, Mrs. Dorothy Ruth Blevins, 9272 Faywood St., Bellflower, in a small shopping center at 12680 Telegraph Road. On the sidewalk are the small pipes used to anchor trash cans.

The child's foot went into the hole at 2:30 p.m. Ann Marie was released at 4:05 p.m. and taken to La Mirada Community Hospital where she was found to be uninjured.

Sheriff's deputies and firemen rushed to the scene. Firemen worked with hammers to free the pipe from the concrete, then brought in workmen with a jackhammer. There were three county fire rigs at the scene, two sheriff's cars and a truck. About a dozen county workers labored to free the child.

The child's father, but not her mother, was located. He and Mrs. Blevins tried to comfort the baby who alternately screamed and sucked her thumb. The babysitter was near fainting and a deputy tried to get her to relax. When finally the pipe was released it was an easy matter to remove the dirt in it, thereby breaking the vacuum which had held the foot trapped.

Teen shot in back

A 39-year-old Long Beach man was arrested on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon early Friday after a teen-ager was shot in the back while allegedly starting to siphon gasoline from a parked car.

Booked on the charge at Long Beach jail, where he remained Friday night under bail of $3,000, was William A. Dudley, of 1937 Olive Ave., police reported.

The wounded teen-ager was identified by officers as John R. Andrews, 17, of 1021 E. Pacific Coast Highway.

He was rushed to St. Mary Medical Center shortly after the 1:05 a.m. shooting adjacent to the Dudley home in the 1900 block of Olive Ave.

At first pronounced in "extremely critical" condition, Andrews was removed from an intensive care ward late Friday after physicians said his condition, still critical, had stabilized.

Officers Alvin Van Otterloo and Paul Armour reported that the youth was struck once in the lower back with a .22-caliber rifle slug as he allegedly held a gas can and siphon hose.

Export-Import Bank

Loans to Red lands resumed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Export-Import Bank announced Friday it is resuming lending activity to the Soviet Union and three other Communist countries after getting approval of its loan-making procedures from Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe.

The bank suspended lending activity to the Soviet Union, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia on March 11 after questions were raised in Congress on whether specific presidential approval was needed for each individual loan.

But an opinion by Saxbe indicated this was not necessary and the bank was meeting congressional imposed requirements by notifying Congress separately of each loan to Communist nations.

In announcing resumption of lending activity to the four Communist countries, the bank said it was approving two new credits for Yugoslavia, two for Romania, four for Poland and four for the Soviet Union.

The largest of the new credits for the Soviet Union is $36 million to help construct and equip an international trade center in Moscow.

The others are $3.4 million for machinery purchases, $2.9 million for canal construction equipment and $2.1 million for valve-making machinery for the petrochemical industry. All of the loans are to USSR's Bank for Foreign Trade.

Export-Import Bank credits are made to foreign countries at low interest to help finance purchase of goods in the U.S. The bank is sponsored by the federal government.

William J. Casey, the new Nixon-appointed president of the bank, announced the resumption of lending activity for the four Communist countries saying, "It has now been decided these transactions were in the national interest."

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., had challenged the loan-making procedure by the bank for Communist countries.

He contended that existing legislation required that the President give specific approval to each loan, rather than overall authority to make loans to a specific Communist country. Schweiker said he specifically opposes a proposed loan of $49.5 million for natural gas development in Eastern Siberia.

WIRETAP

edly evoked strong protests from Kissinger, then Nixon's national security adviser. As a result of his protest, the President appointed Kissinger, the late J. Edgar Hoover and John Mitchell, then the attorney general, to coordinate an investigation of the leaks to the press.

Nixon also approved the wiretapping of those officials suspected by Kissinger as the sources of the leaks. The wiretaps were installed without the court orders that are required by law in ordinary criminal cases. The installation was made under an "inherent power" claimed by Nixon to prevent the nation's security from being compromised.

Neither Congress nor the Supreme Court has ever recognized an "inherent power" to wiretap for this purpose.

Justice Department sources have said that information entirely unrelated to national security flowed into the White House from some of the 17 wiretaps. But the information relating to Muskie was the first indication that some details of his campaign planning were in the hands of high White House operatives long before the presidential primaries in which the senator was a target of political espionage and sabotage.

The FBI documents show that the summaries of the wiretapped conversations were initially sent to Kissinger.

But in June, 6 1970, about midway through the 21-month, top-secret program, the summaries were diverted to Haldeman. Accordingly, it would have been Haldeman who received the reports of Halperin's conversations about Muskie's political plans.

Haldeman was indicted by a federal grand jury two weeks ago, along with six other men, for conspiring to obstruct the criminal investigation into the June, 1972, Watergate burglary.

Some of the reports on Halperin received by Haldeman, sources who have seen them said, contained references to Muskie's activities in behalf of his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination at a time when he was widely considered the frontrunning candidate against Nixon.

He said, however, that he did have discussions about campaign strategy with some of the senator's top aides and advisers over his home telephone before the wiretap was removed in February, 1971.

Neither the sources nor the FBI documents made clear to what use, if any, the White House may have put the information on the Muskie campaign supplied by the wiretap. According to Halperin the reports of his conversations might have included advance knowledge of the senator's speeches in the foreign policy area and particularly on the Vietnam war.

It is unclear whether Nixon himself was aware that the wiretap was producing political intelligence on Muskie. However, a measure of Nixon's awareness of the sensitivity of some of the wiretap reports is indicated by one FBI document made available to the times.

The document is a report of a field interview with Robert Mardian, a former assistant attorney general who, at Nixon's insistence, played a central role in removing the records of the Halperin and other wiretapes from the bureau's files to the White House.

Sometime in July of 1971, Mardian recalled, he was summoned by William Sullivan, who had been in charge of the bureau's end of the wiretap program. Mardian recalled that Sullivan told him of information he wanted to turn over to the President because he believed Hoover could not be trusted to preserve its confidentiality.

Mardian said that he obtained the records and delivered them to Kissinger and Alexander Haig, then Kissinger's assistant.

He and Kissinger checked the originals against the copies of the early summaries in Kissinger's files, Mardian said, and a similar check was made with the later summaries in Haldeman's files.

Mardian recalled that he took the material into the Oval Room of the White House and left it there, but he would not say with whom.

"Did you give the bag to Mr. Nixon, the President of the United States?" Mardian was asked by the FBI agents.

The interview report relates that Mardian "sat back in his chair, shrugged his shoulders, hesitated and said, 'I cannot answer that question.'"

County mails out gas 'C' sticker applications

Our L.A. Bureau

Working under extreme pressure, county officials Friday mailed out applications to service stations for the "C" stickers, available to persons who use their cars on business and require exemptions from the odd-even requirements of the state gasoline distribution plan.

Originally, officials had hoped that the applications would have been ready early enough to be in the hands of station operators by Friday and to be available in public buildings such as fire and sheriff's stations but state approval of the plan was delayed.

Nevertheless, persons who think they might qualify for the "C" sticker may shortly get applications. As long as motorists are prepared to sign affidavits saying they average more than 100 miles a day in the pursuit of their profession, trade, business or legally established organization, and that the odd-even requirements of the state's mandatory plan will "create an economic hardship," they may obtain from the county a "C" sticker at a $5 fee.

In several diverse directives last week, County officials said that the sticker should be placed on either the back window or the windshield. As of Friday, the latest directive said to place it on the rear window.

However, in terms of the totally uncertain directives of the county at this time, motorists who qualify for the "C" sticker should follow the directions on the form they receive with their sticker.

60 Southland dealers to 'refund' gas overcharges

United Press International

Sixty retail gasoline dealers in five Southern California counties have agreed to roll back prices and "refund" more than $92,000 resulting from fuel overcharges, the Internal Revenue Service reported Friday.

Barry Rans, IRS stabilization chief in Los Angeles, said the overcharges occurred during a two week period ending March 15.

The rollbacks mean the service stations generally will lower their present gasoline and diesel fuel prices until they have "lost" the excess profit made by overcharging.

The IRS said the overcharges ranged between one and five cents, he said. It added that most were "honest mistakes" resulting from confusion over mandated fuel prices.

Lakewood Plaza phone silence

A Southern California Edison Co. work crew silenced about 800 telephones in the Lakewood Plaza area for more than eight hours Friday—but it was an accident.

Edison said a post-hole auger used in placing a utility pole severed a 2,400-wire General Telephone Co. cable about 11:30 a.m. The accident occurred at Conant Street and Stearns Avenue.

A repair crew from General Telephone restored the knocked-out service at 8 p.m.

Planning phase set U.S. to aid Compton crime crackdown

BY LARRY LYNCH
Staff Writer

A Federal Department of Justice agency Friday committed itself to planning and implementing—with local cooperation and 90 per cent federal funding—new crime fighting programs for Compton.

The planning phase, which will be 100 per cent federally funded, should take six months and cost about $100,000, Charles Work, deputy administrator of the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Administration, said in an interview.

In a two-hour briefing session at Compton City Hall with more than 100 court, law enforcement, probation and city officials, Work declined to give a firm dollar figure for the federal commitment.

"We did not bring our checkbook today because we want to do the planning to see what it will take," he said.

"The notion that is central to what we are kicking off here today is the notion of partnership. An ordinary federal grant has often descended on a city, where it is said: 'Here are some bucks and here is what we want you to do with it.' This is not our style. We are interested in a lasting improvement."

Work said a six-member team of Assistance Administration experts would be assigned to work with a committee of local criminal justice system leaders during the planning phase.

Paul Haynes, director of the office of national priority programs in the LEAA, will head that agency's team, Work said.

Haynes outlined the structure of the federal program and presented a "shopping list" of the type of projects that might be identified by a planning effort, then receive 90 per cent federal funding with 10 per cent local matching funds.

This list included: crime prevention clinics, neighborhood crime control programs, rape and assault prevention programs, youth services bureau programs, juvenile gang intervention programs and a court diagnostic center for offenders among two dozen possibilities.

Haynes asked that local court and police officials bring to the project four things—"commitment to improvement, elimination of red tape, intent to institutionalize (the test programs that are funded), and cooperation."

Compton Police Chief Thomas Cochee pledged cooperation as he outlined Compton's crime problem, recently identified as the worst citywide among U.S. municipalities of more than 50,000 population.

Cochee cited socio-economic and youth-related factors—an 11 per cent unemployment rate that is 35 to 50 per cent "among brown and black youth in some sections of town." He said 50 per cent of Compton's residents are under 20 years of age and that police arrest more than 2,000 juveniles a year.

Compton Municipal Court Judge Huey P. Shepard said, "We are going to see that the program becomes a reality."

Shepard said he has been concerned about the adverse publicity Compton has been getting from critics who weren't committed to helping solve the problem. "Isn't it going to be interesting that in a very short period of time people are going to be looking at us and coming to us and asking us how we can help them put their thing together?" the judge said.

Mayor Doris Davis, elected last year on an anti-crime platform, said, "We have joined together to make this our top priority. We will solve our problem."

City auditor report

Fee urged for those living aboard boats

BY DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

People who live aboard their boats in Long Beach Marina should pay a higher fee than those who merely moor their vessels there, according to the city auditor's office.

"Obviously, a permit holder living aboard his boat all the time is going to utilize a greater proportion of the utilities and other services provided by the city than one who does not live aboard," the audit report said.

City Auditor Murray T. Courson said 104 marina permit holders were living aboard their boats, as of Jan. 15. Anyone living aboard for more than three consecutive days must register with the Marine Department, but is not now charged an additional fee.

The annual auditor of the Marine Department for fiscal 1973 recommended that owners who live aboard be charged a supplemental fee for added costs of electricity, water, trash pickup, restrooms, showers, cleaning and maintenance.

Courson said the recommendation is "strongly opposed" by Eric Lucas, director of the Marine Department, who expressed concern that increasing the fee for persons living aboard would induce them to make more demands for service.

The auditor's office said, however, it felt the charge was "particularly appropriate" in view of present energy shortages. A check of other marinas in the area indicates most levy such an additional charge for people who live aboard moored vessels, the report said.

Courson's office also recommended that the city establish a "nominal fee" for boat owners to have their name placed on the waiting list or slips in Long Beach Marina.

The audit noted that the waiting list consists of a manually prepared card file, covering about 9,000 applications for slip rental. New assignments are based on application dates.

"It seems apparent that setting up and maintaining such a voluminous list involves a considerable amount of work," the audit report said.

It also pointed out that no duplicate of the list would be available, in the event of loss or accidental destruction, and recommended that consideration be given to the use of data processing in maintaining the waiting list.

The proposed fee to be placed on the list would offset the cost of administering it, the report said.

Students still feeling effects of Russ trip

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

About 80 per cent of the girls and chaperones in a 215-person drill team contingent, which flew to Russia last November to represent Western and Huntington Beach high schools, returned with an intestinal infection, and some are still suffering from the disease, Orange County health officials said Friday.

Dr. John Philp, county health officer, said a study by his department revealed that 163 persons developed illnesses after their return home Nov. 26 and 27. He said questionnaires were mailed to all 215 tour participants, among them 132 female students at the two schools, and replies were received from 199 persons.

Some of the cases have worsened, while others have gone into remission, Philp said. The doctor added most of the illnesses were forms of gastroenteritis (inflammation of the intestinal tract), which causes upset stomachs, nausea and vomiting.

In addition, Dr. Philp said parasites confirming the presence of Giardia infections were discovered in 30 of the tour participants. Of those, 17 suffered from an ailment diagnosed as Giardia lamblia, he noted. Its symptoms include fatigue, diarrhea, abdominal cramps, nausea, vomiting and anorexia.

All but one of the patients said they had been extremely uncomfortable, the doctor said.

Of the 17 infected with Giardia lamblia, 16 ate ice cream while in Russia, 14 consumed salads and 13 ate fresh fruits or vegetables. Only two drank milk, Philp said.

He warned that the nationwide number of Giardia lamblia cases has steadily increased with the rise of American tourism to Russia.

Before the infection can be diagnosed, a physician must perform a series of three intestinal examinations for parasites, Philp said.

The health officer, who termed treatment for the disease "simple and effective," said untreated cases "not only can be miserable but may cause those infected to lose extended periods from work or school."

He said individual cases of the ailment do not require notification of the State Health Department but should be reported to the local public health officer.

Japanese-style acupuncture not so painful

BY BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

A Japanese method of acupuncture often gives better pain relief than traditional techniques because of its emphasis on precision puncturing, a Japanese anesthesiologist said in Long Beach Friday.

Dr. Kumio Yamashita, interviewed through an interpreter, said that any doctor can easily learn how to find key needle-puncture points by using an electronic device called the autonomic nerve measuring and regulating device.

Yamashita, affiliated with the First National Hospital of Tokyo, was in Long Beach to conduct a three-day postgraduate course in Ryodoraku acupuncture at Pacific Hospital.

ONCE the key points are located, the heads of the acupuncture needles are stimulated by electricity. One advantage here, Yamashita said, is that treatments require only five to 10 minutes in contrast to 20 to 30 minutes with conventional acupuncture.

In conventional acupuncture, the needles are not electrified.

The Ryodoraku treatment technique was developed about 25 years ago by Dr. Yoshio Nakatani of Tokyo, Yamashita said.

Yamashita said he treats 40 to 50 patients daily for pain problems and that 70 to 80 per cent are treated with electric acupuncture.

Besides treating pain, Yamashita said he has been obtaining good results with the method in treating psychiatric depression. He said the method often works better than does conventional electroshock.

ALTHOUGH Yamashita says electric acupuncture is quick and effective, he does not rely on it entirely. He said his pain clinic employs combination treatments including conventional acupuncture and Western methods—"nerve blocks."

He said that with electronic locating equipment, time-consuming Chinese-type pulse diagnosis is not necessary. The patient's condition can be rapidly determined and treatment begun sooner.

The Ryodoraku technique is based on stimulation of the autonomic nervous system, that part concerned with the control of involuntary bodily functions such as those involving glands.

Everybody'll be flying his kite in L.B. today

Hundreds of children and adults will gather on the beach at the foot of Junipero Avenue today for the 48th annual Long Beach Kite Festival, co-sponsored by the Recreation Department and the Rotary Club.

Youngsters who are entering their kites in competition should be on the beach at 11 a.m. The festival will get underway at noon, with the release of the "Balloons to the Moon," hundreds of helium-filled balloons.

Competition will be at a minimum, explained Betty Brown, supervisor of special events for the Recreation Department, and the main goal of the annual festival is "sheer joy of flying kites."

There are contests for the youngsters, however. Schools and playgrounds throughout the city have been conducting competition during the last few weeks to select entries in today's sweepstakes events. Award presentations will take place at 3:30 p.m.

Following the award ceremonies, there will be a reception for all adult participants in the Kite Festival, to be held in the Bixby Park clubhouse, 130 Cherry Ave. Refreshments will be served, films will be shown and an informal seminar of kite flying will be held.

Awards and prizes for the festival, as well as for the nearly 60 contests at schools and playgrounds, were donated by the Long Beach Rotary Club, which also is noting its 48th year of participation in the event.

Two L.B. hospitals to combine OB services

Pacific Hospital of Long Beach and Memorial Hospital Medical Center announced Friday they are combining their obstetrical services. All obstetrical patients will now be cared for at Memorial.

The plan, according to an announcement from the hospitals, is an effort to reduce the cost of health care.

Memorial Medical Center, it was pointed out, also features the services of the Earl and Loraine Miller Children's Hospital, which specializes in care of the newborn with complications.

Memorial also is planning to start a regional Women's Hospital—another reason for the consolidation of obstetrical services, it was announced.

Greeks set national day

The flags of the United States and Greece will be raised at 12:30 p.m. Sunday at the Harbor Administration Plaza in a ceremony commemorating the 153rd anniversary of Greek independence.

The observance by the Long Beach Greek community will begin with morning services at the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church.

Rev. Nicholas J. Billiris, minister of the church, also will participate in the flag-raising ceremony, as will Mayor Edwin W. Wade and the Long Beach Municipal Band.

It was on March 25, 1821, that the Greeks successfully revolted against their Turkish rulers.

Ecology panel faces easy day

Regional coastal commissioners are scheduled to face a relatively light agenda Monday when they meet at 9 a.m. in the Long Beach Harbor Department's board room, 925 Harbor Plaza Drive.

Only 25 items are listed for consideration, and only three of these concern local projects.

Two applications — a 20-unit apartment building at 2543 Via Campesina, Palos Verdes Estates, and an 11,500-square-foot commercial shopping center at 414 17th St., Huntington Beach — are on the agenda for reconsideration.

That means both projects were once denied by commissioners but received a reprieve when new evidence was brought before the commission. They could be denied a second time, or the commission could reverse itself and give the developers permission to build within the coastal zone.

The third area construction project to be considered is a proposal by Urban Reconstruction Corp., to build a five-unit apartment at 506 19th St., Huntington Beach. It is on the agenda for the first time and will receive a full public hearing.

Fischer-Dieskau's U.S. debut Singer picks up baton in L.A.

By DAVID LEVINSON
Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau made his American conducting debut with the Los Angeles Philharmonic

Thursday. It was creditable but nothing to make one sorry that Fischer-Dieskau's next appearance with the Philharmonic will be as the singer of Gustav Mahler's Songs of a Wayfarer.

That will be April 4, 5 and 7. Those curious about Fischer-Dieskau the conductor, though, will be able to see him in action at the Music Center Pavilion at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The program is all by Robert Schumann: the Manfred overture, the third symphony and the piano concerto. Horacio Gutierrez is the soloist in the concerto. He substitutes for Daniel Barenboim, who was originally scheduled to play the work.

Fischer-Dieskau's knowledge of the music is clearly thorough. And he must love it. A conductor who elects an all-Schumann program must do so for some reason other than its opportunities for dramatic effects on the podium.

FISCHER-Dieskau's baton waving is occasionally awkward, occasionally jerky, occasionally quavering. There were times when he looked like a figure out of a silent movie, gesticulating generously for an audience of slow readers who can't keep up with the subtitles.

The results are what count, of course, and the results were uneven. Once in a while a fluttery beat of the baton contributed to a shakiness of attack on the part of the performers. Balance occasionally suffered, and overall dynamic levels tended to range from medium loud to very loud, even in the second movement of the concerto, which clearly calls for delicacy.

In the main, the concerto accompaniment was well handled, however, and Gutierrez delivered a supple, sensitive performance.

PIANISTS tend to regard this concerto as the sort of thing Mozart would have written if he had been lucky enough to live in the middle of the 19th century. Gutierrez made that view of the work almost persuasive. The passage work was fleet, but it was never merely that; there was no emphasis on display. Phrases were shaped effortlessly and with regard for their place in the work. The formal outlines of the piece were clear, but everything flowed. It was a poetic performance of a poetic concerto.

The Rhenish symphony is much less interesting as a composition. In the Thursday performance, although the tempos were not fast, there was a feeling of hurry, as if things were not quite under control.

It is unusual for a singer to become a conductor, but there is no reason it should be any more remarkable a feat than for a violinist, cellist, pianist or composer to take up the baton. At least it should not be more remarkable for a singer

Cerritos concert

The Eagles, a popular rock vocal group, will be presented in a concert at Cerritos College gymnasium, 11110 E. Alondra Blvd., Norwalk, from 8 to 11 p.m. March 29 under the sponsorship of the Associated Students of Cerritos College. # Streaking leaves her cold

NEW YORK — Have you ever tried to explain streaking to a foreign visitor? Pretty English actress Charlotte Rampling, who is not exactly backward, as she once said she loved two men, was puzzled at this new American sport and asked me, "What does it entail?"

"If it's just nudity, we've had that in a theatrical sense in England for years," Miss Rampling said. "I've gone nude in a film, but I look upon it as a matter of costume. The scene may require beautiful clothing or no clothing at all. I don't separate the body from the gown."

"Well," I said, "you see the streakers DO separate the gown from the body. That seems to be the whole thing."

"There are so many misunderstandings in life," she said. "I once caused sort of a scandal by saying I lived with two men and loved them both.

"We were just like any people sharing an apartment. Well, I fell in love with one of them and we got married and the other man got his own apartment, but we're all very close.

Miss Rampling has noticed that in America as well as England there is a lot of apartment-sharing by people "who can't afford to have a nice flat on their own."

"Everybody is doing it," she said. "I would be out-of-date now living with two men. I should be living with at least four."

Sid Caesar'll try the cafe scene: he'll star at NY's Rainbow Grill, opening April 22 ... Jimmy Durante, still in a wheelchair, is seeing friends at his Beverly Hills home, his condition greatly improved since suffering a stroke a year ago ... Michael Bennett quit as director of "Thieves," now in Boston tryouts ... Comic David Brenner, who's been appearing with Sonny & Cher, says of their splitup, "I wonder who gets custody of me."

Today's Best Laugh: Maureen Stapleton says she's going to LA, but not by plane: "I never travel in anything that, if something goes wrong, the driver can't stop and go for help."

Remembered Quote: "You can't spend yourself rich and you can't drink yourself sober." — Sen. Herman Talmadge.

Earl's Pearls: "All my life I dreamed of owning a Rolls Royce," says Don Rickles. "So now I own one—and I need a guy to push me around town in it."

BROWN URGED TO QUIT

FRESNO (AP)—Edmund G. Brown Jr. should resign immediately as secretary of state to avoid a conflict of interest while he's running for governor, said lieutenant governor hopeful John G. Veneman Friday.

Veneman, a Republican, said Brown's official duties include making certain that candidates, including himself, obey election and financial disclosure laws.

Flournoy tries to block him

Reinecke fights for CRA backing

By DOUG WILLIS

FRESNO (AP)—Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke is putting his campaign for governor on the line again this weekend at the California Republican Assembly.

Last weekend in Anaheim, state Controller Houston Flournoy blocked Reinecke's bid for an endorsement from the conservative California Young Republicans.

This weekend Reinecke, 50, is trying again for an endorsement from a conservative CRA, and Flournoy, 44, whose power base is with moderate and liberal Republicans, is trying again to block him. Reinecke needs a two-thirds vote of CRA delegates Sunday, and leaders of the organization predict it will be a close vote.

"At this point, it appears that Ed Reinecke is the clear favorite of a majority of the delegates who will be attending the convention. Whether the Flournoy forces can block the needed two-thirds vote for the important endorsement is the only question," said CRA president Dick Krugh.

Reinecke's bid for an endorsement is the main attraction of the three-day CRA convention which opened Friday in Fresno. Other convention events include an appearance by Gov. Reagan, endorsement votes for other statewide offices and election of CRA officers.

Reinecke desperately needs to come home from Fresno not with a draw, but a win, because the tide has been running against him lately.

The lieutenant governor has been the front-runner and the governor's race. He is also the one-time heir to the powerful conservative power base of the Reagan administration.

But Reinecke has been plagued by questions about his role in the ITT scandal.

He contends he is innocent in the matter and hasn't perjured himself. Meanwhile, the Watergate prosecutor's investigation of that incident continues.

Last week Reinecke took a lie detector test administered by FBI agents in an effort to clear his name completely in the ITT controversy. The results of that test have not been made public yet.

During recent weeks, a number of key Republicans have defected from his campaign. But Reinecke repeatedly has said in public that defections aren't that important because he has the rank and file Republicans with him.

However, he was unable to show a strong following last week at the California Young Republicans Convention, and anything short of a two-thirds vote for CRA endorsement this weekend would be treated as a Reinecke defeat.

Flournoy, the fast rising No. 2 GOP contender, can gain more momentum if

Record number of hats in ring

By CHARLES McFADDEN

SACRAMENTO (AP)—The most crowded ballot in modern California history has 29 persons running for governor in the June 4 primary, the secretary of state's office said Friday.

The final, though unofficial, list of candidates also has 13 persons running for lieutenant governor; 14 for secretary of state; 11 for state controller; another 11 for treasurer; three for attorney general and seven for state superintendent of public instruction.

There are also 11 persons running for the U.S. Senate. That list has three Democrats, including incumbent Alan Cranston, five Republicans, two members of the Peace and Freedom Party and one American Independent.

The final certified list of candidates will be mailed to county clerks and registrars of voters March 28 for ballot printing.

California political observers say that is the biggest crowd of hopefuls in recent state history.

They add there are a number of reasons for the huge number of candidates:

WATERGATE—There is a feeling among some political hopefuls that incumbents are in trouble because the Watergate scandal has triggered an overall disgust of those in office. That means now is the time to jump into office against one of them, some challengers believe.

REAPPORTIONMENT—The change in legislative and congressional district lines has left some incumbents in new territory, presumably more vulnerable to challenges. Other legislators are trying for statewide offices, leaving vacancies behind in the State Senate and Assembly.

VACANCIES—Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger and Wilson Riles, the state superintendent of public instruction, are the only two incumbents running for re-election to statewide offices. There is no incumbent in the races for governor, lieutenant governor, treasurer or state controller.

FEES—The courts have ruled poor people don't have to plunk down the filing fees to become a candidate if they don't have the money. In the case of the governor, the filing fee is $982. As of Friday, seven of the 29 persons on the governor list had not put up the filing fee, the secretary of state's office said.

There are 18 Democrats and only six Republicans in the race for governor. The list also includes four members of the Peace and Freedom Party, three of whom have not paid fees, along with one American Independent.

Moretti says he's never broken a commitment

By BOB HOUSER

Political Editor Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti told the Democratic Rostrum in Anaheim Friday he has not, in 10 years' legislative service, "ever broken a commitment to anybody."

That is why, he said, there will be so many assemblymen endorsing his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor. "And they don't need to do it because I won't be speaker next year; but they have seen me stand up to the special interests."

THE ASSEMBLY has done its job, Moretti told the luncheon gathering in the Anaheim Stadium Club, even though some Assembly-passed measures were lost in the State Senate or were vetoed by Gov. Reagan.

He claimed, too, that "lobbyists — the Third House — no longer run the Assembly; they can't perfunctorily kill or pass legislation as they see fit."

Moretti noted the numerous chairmanships held by various minorities during his three years as speaker of the Assembly. "And our house moved education legislation which will provide $332 million new dollars for primary and secondary education against a man like Ronald Reagan who doesn't believe all that strongly in a public education system."

The Assembly passed coastline legislation three years in a row, Moretti pointed out, but it did not get out of the Senate and finally won when placed on the statewide ballot. To help defeat public cynicism about government, the next governor "ought to be one who can do things for people," Moretti said. And the voter should consider that the next governor "will appoint six of the seven State Supreme Court justices; and their decisions will affect the state for 20 or 30 years."

"If it takes being tough to make some changes happen in California, to make state government look a little bit more like what we've been able to do in the state Assembly, then that is damned well what I am determined to do."

Moretti criticized Reagan's security entourage, asserting his personal style would be considerably different:

"I don't believe in carrying an army around with me so that there is something between me and people — to protect me from people. First of all, if somebody wants to get you they're going to get you ... if I come here to talk to you I don't want you to have to fight your way through 12 security people to get near me. I want to walk up and shake your hand and say hello ... and let you yell at me a little bit if that's what you want to do."

California should work at being the nation's leader, he said.

Mosk political fund for allies disclosed

SACRAMENTO (AP)—State Supreme Court Justice Stanley Mosk has maintained a political campaign fund during his 10 years on the high court, occasionally disbursing money to favored candidates, the Riverside Press-Enterprise said Friday.

The newspaper said the fund, set up in 1962, two years before the 61-year-old Mosk was appointed to the high court by former Gov. Edmund G. Brown, now totals $22,633.

Candidates who have received funds from it have included former Assembly Speaker Jess Unruh and Charles O'Brien, Democratic nominee for state attorney general in 1970.

Mosk, a former state attorney general, said the fund was set up from surplus donations to his 1962 re-election campaign.

He said the fund was intended to further his political career and was not dissolved when he was named to the Supreme Court "only because there was always the possibility of a return to active political life."

Officials of the State Judicial Qualifications Commission said there is no law against judges maintaining campaign funds. But they said disciplinary action could possibly be brought against Mosk under a section of the California Constitution prohibiting conduct by judges which is "prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute."

The newspaper said

Unruh and O'Brien each received $1,000 from the fund during the 1970 campaign.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: This year will see dramatic development in any reasonably organized program of self-improvement. Spiritual growth almost comes spontaneously—you help it along with regular meditation. Material affairs thrive readily as you put in normal work efforts. Today's natives have an eye for the beautiful and are willing to contribute toward its maintenance in personal service as well as sharing of resources.

Aries (March 21-April 19): This Sunday lends itself to mental pursuits, your favorite hobby, light or minimal physical activity. It is also important to maintain connections.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): A pleasant episode can be shared with those nearby today. You have to supply the energy that sets things in motion. Events don't simply happen of their own accord.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Instead of valiantly struggling to keep them busy this Sunday, try letting people be themselves and just watching to get to know them better.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Although you may not be as full of vim and vigor as you usually are, you can get a great deal in the way of personal projects accomplished today.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): The analysis of past incidents yields surprising insight, stirs you to planning a more definite future. Information from or about someone you care for should set your mind at ease.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Assume a fresh start begins when you arise on this quiet Sunday and strive to make it a good one. Avoid squabbles or quibbles over trivia.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Carry your full share of the community customs. There is little to do, no rush to do it. Much is to be gained by viewing life in the most optimistic terms.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A few details may need to be corrected or brought up to date, but do not get anything started you cannot finish alone before the day is out.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Offer an early invitation, gather old friends to join in familiar pastimes. Let home life follow its usual patterns.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Perhaps it's spring, perhaps it's your own serenely personal approach—this is as good a time as any to announce new policy, a new status in your world.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Let your friends assume much of the leadership on this easy-going Sunday. Just go along for the pleasure of their company and enjoyment of the ride.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Subjective self-stimulation describes the mood of the day, although there is not to be little solitude for exercises which stretch the mind.

Nostalgia film set in '43

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

If the nostalgia kick on television hasn't already knocked you down and left you begging for relief, there's a new movie airing tonight that you may wish to tune in.

It's titled "Remember When" and will be shown from 9 to 11 on NBC (Channel 4).

And, yes, it's a pilot for a possible fall series.

There are some good people involved in the production of "Remember When," so it's probably worth a look. They include the star, Jack Warden; the director, Buzz Kulik; the producer, Paul Junger Witt, and the writer, Herman Raucher, who gave us "The Summer of '42."

The film, turned out by Danny Thomas Productions in association with NBC-TV, reunited Warden, Kulik and Witt, all of whom helped to make the TV movie "Brian's Song" the big hit that it was. Warden won an Emmy as best supporting actor for his role in that one.

"REMEMBER WHEN," billed as a comedy-drama, is set in 1943 and deals with a Connecticut family's concern for four of its boys in combat and its adjusting to wartime restrictions at home.

Warden plays Uncle Joe Hodges, a slightly oddball character who lives with the family and contributes a steady stream of wit, wisdom and crazy schemes for ending the war.

William Schallert is Joe's brother, Dan, head of the family, and Nan Martin plays his wife. Jamie Smith Jackson co-stars as Joanna, a married daughter living with the family, and Robby Benson is Frankie, a 16-year-old son who can't wait to go to war.

Portraying Beverly, a 17-year-old daughter, is Margaret Willock. She is pursued by a young sailor, played by Tim Mathe-son.

"Remember When" was filmed on location in the Stockton and Sacramento areas of California.

THE BIG GAME between UCLA and North Carolina State in the NCAA basketball tournament semifinals airs at noon today from Greensboro, N.C. It will be preceded, starting at 10, by the other semifinal between Kansas and Marquette. Both games will be carried on NBC (Channel 4).

Today's winners will clash for the championship Monday evening, and NBC will televise it, starting at 6, our time.

CAROL BURNETT will have as guests on her show tonight (10 to 11 on Channel 2) comedian-impressionist John Byner and Francine Beers, the woman who played the funny lady tenant in last Sunday night's "6 Rms Riv. Vu" comedy-drama special on CBS. And, incidentally, I thought Miss Burnett and Alan Alda were both great in "6 Rms Riv. Vu." Miss Beers was just right in her part, too. In one of tonight's sketches, Francine plays a pesky neighbor who locks herself out of her apartment.

"CLEOPATRA" returns to television as a two-part movie airing Sunday and Monday nights on ABC (Channel 7). It will be on from 8:30 to 10:30 Sunday and from 9 to midnight Monday. The $40 million 1963 epic stars Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton and Rex Harrison.

BILLIE JEAN KING will be profiled by Howard Cosell on "Howard Cosell's Sports Magazine," airing from 3:15 to 3:30 p.m. Sunday. Howard has called the Long Beach native "along with Muhammad Ali, the most important figure in American sports today."

"REFLECCIONES," a Channel 7 public affairs program, moves to 7 p.m. alternate Saturdays, starting today. Written and produced by Tony Rodriguez, it focuses on the Mexican-American community and will alternate with "I Am Somebody."

MIRIAM SMITH, executive director of the Youth Development Project in Long Beach, was honored on Channel 7's "Girl in My Life" program taped last Monday

The show is scheduled for airing during the third week of April. Starting April 1, the weekday series will move to the new time period of 11:30 a.m.

End — or extension — to UCLA's NCAA dynasty?

No. 1 Wolfpack underdog to No. 2 Bruins

Combined News Services

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Like the Yankees and Celtics of old, UCLA will be the team everyone is shooting at when the final round of the NCAA basketball championships unfolds today.

North Carolina State, which suffered an 84-66 embarrassment against UCLA in December, will get first crack at John Wooden's Bruins at 12:10 p.m. (Channel 4). That's the big one, the one most felt will determine whether the Bruins, 3 1/2-point favorites, can win an eighth successive NCAA title.

Kansas is a 4 1/2-point underdog to Marquette in the first nationally televised semifinal at 10:10 a.m.

There have been several chinks pounded into UCLA's armor this season, most notably the losses at Notre Dame, Oregon and Oregon State. But perhaps the one thing looming largest in this final round of four is No. 1 North Carolina State's earlier loss to No. 2 UCLA.

Beating such a team as N.C. State twice, especially a second time in an arena that will be filled with Wolfpack partisans, may prove difficult — even for the Bill Walton-led Bruins.

"If there is an advantage to having played before," said Wooden Friday, "I'd rather have been on the long end of the score."

"I remember they beat us by 18 points and that Walton played only half the game," said State coach Norm Sloan. "But I think both teams are different now, and that both are better. I know we're improved. We're just going to try to play to the best of our ability."

"I don't think the first game is going to have any effect on this one. If there is a psychological advantage, I'd hope it works for us. I hope the fans are all for us. I think we're definitely in an underdog position."

There's little doubt most of the 15,761 fans in Greensboro Coliseum will be rooting for the Wolfpack. In fact, about 6,000 showed up to watch the Pack work out Friday afternoon and they cheered on every fastbreak layup.

Both semifinal and final sessions are sold out and Greensboro is full of rumors about outlandish scalping prices being paid — up to $1,000 for a pair of tickets.

As for the previous UCLA-North Carolina State meeting, Sloan said he wished it had never happened.

"I felt right after the game that I wished we hadn't played it," he said. "I still feel that way. What Wooden said is valid. The fact that they beat us by 18 points is good for them and bad for us."

As for today's shootout, Wooden added, "I really think it should be a great basketball game. Both teams have superstars (Bill Walton and David Thompson), both teams have big men (Walton and Tom Burleson), both teams have good intermediate men and both have a good supporting cast."

Kansas' match with Marquette has been largely overlooked.

"It sure is nice to be playing in the B-class game," said Marquette coach Al McGuire. "I told our players if they lose, they can look forward to playing UCLA or North Carolina State Monday night."

Of course, the same can be said if Marquette wins.

Chico St. turns on power, leads NCAA swim

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

Defending champion Chico State utilized a pool full of "best time" performances Friday night to vault into the team lead after two days of the NCAA's Division II swimming and diving championships.

Bruce Oliver, Dennis Glass, Peter Hovland, Gary Stiefvater and the 800 freestyle relay team of Chris Webb, Stuart Kahn, Steve Wallen and event, winning the 200 freestyle in 1:43.305 after qualifying fifth.

Glass' contribution was a fourth in the 100 butterfly, won by Johns Hopkins' all-America Bill Milne in 51.908. It was the second gold medal of this meet for Milne and the eighth in his four-year career.

Oliver came next, finishing third in the backstroke, an accomplishment that went unnoticed since Thomas, with less than 40 minutes rest, was winning his second race of the night by backstroking 100 yards in 53.860.

Chico was shut out in the 100 breaststroke — won by Hamilton's Jeff Carlberg in 1:01.116 — but finished the night in grand style by defending its title in the 800 freestyle relay.

Webb swam the first 200 yards in 1:43.5 and was followed by Kahn (1:45.5), Wallen (1:46.8) and Hovland (1:48.0) for a college division record time of 6:59.65.

Swimming to teammates' chants of "we're No. 1," the Chico relay team knocked nearly eight seconds off its best time while outdistancing runnerup Northridge by nearly one length of the 25-yard pool.

ROBERT THOMAS
Double winner

Hovland all logged sensational times to enable Chico to score 101 points Friday night for a two-day total of 172, 34 better than Northern California rival UC Davis.

Eastern Illinois, sparked by the double gold medal performance of Bob Thomas, collected 69 points Friday for a third-place total of 101 going into today's final round of competition.

Time trials are at noon today at Belmont Plaza's Olympic Pool and finals begin at 7:30. Admission is $3 for the trials and $5 for the finals.

Stiefvater set the tempo for Chico State's team effort when he chopped nine seconds off his best time to finish second to Thomas in the night's first event, the 400-individual medley, which Thomas won in 4:12.77.

Hovland maintained the momentum in the next

Practicing for So. African 'Grand Prix' Revson dies in crash

Combined News Services

Auto racing lost one of its most glamorous international figures Friday when Peter Revson was killed during a practice run for the South African Grand Prix.

The 35-year-old bachelor, who lived in a beachfront apartment in Redondo Beach and held a partnership with Peyton Cramer in a Harbor City car dealership, died instantly when his Ford UOP Shadow failed to negotiate the sharp "Barbecue Bend" on the Kyalami circuit at Johannesburg.

The car hurtled the guardrail and crashed in flames. Fellow race driver Graham Hill of England, first to reach the wreck, said there was evidence that "something went wrong with the front suspension."

Hill and others, assisted by fire crews, pulled Revson from the fiery rubble but he was already dead.

Revson had arrived early for the March 30 race to shake down the car and had been working with his mechanics to solve handling problems.

"The front end just seemed to collapse," said a witness.

Revson's younger brother Doug was killed in a racing crash in Spain in 1967 and Peter's career never was accepted by his wealthy family, which founded the Revlon cosmetics empire — an association Peter preferred to forget.

He usually was referred to as "heir" to the fortune, but once said, "I'm the poor relation. I think I'm about 11th in line."

He admitted to being a three-time college dropout and insisted he would "make my way as a race driver."

Highlights of his career included winning the Can-Am Series Championship in 1971, victories in the British and Canadian Grand Prix last year and winning the pole position and finishing second in the Indianapolis 500 in 1971.

He left Team McLaren after last year to drive Formula One races for Shadow and USAC competition for Roger Penske, including this year's Indy race.

GEORGE FOLLMER of Arcadia, who campaigned the Grand Prix circuit with Revson last year, said, "Pete was as dedicated to the sport as anybody in it... he wanted to live down that jet-set image."

But Revson, handsome and personable in a quiet way, often was linked with beauties of the world, most recently Miss World, Marjorie Wallace, 20, of Indianapolis, who was forced to surrender her crown, but not because of her association with Revson.

Revson joked, "I'm not going to quit racing until I win a world title, too."

Russians (groan) grapple past U.S. wrestlers, 18-2

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

The Russians could have saved themselves the trouble of bringing their psychologist to America.

Their Olympic-studded wrestling team didn't need to be psyched up in beating the Yanks, 18-2, Friday night before 2,665 at the Long Beach Arena.

One of the strongest freestyle teams to come out of Russia in years scored its second successive win on its six-stop U.S. tour. The Soviets had beaten a composite U.S. squad, 16-4, in New York Tuesday night.

The Russians never have lost a dual match to the U.S. and the hosts were never a threat, as only Sergio Gonzales of Redondo Beach came away with a win — and that was the result of a forfeit.

Before every match the Soviets' physician, Viktor Lomazde, gives the Russian wrestlers a formal pep talk and afterward he talks them down. In other words, he turns them on and then turns them off.

In the night's two premier matches, the Soviets' Olympic 220-pound light heavyweight champion, Ivan Yarygin, scored a second-period fall over Buck Deadrich of San Leandro, and 6-7, 260-pound Soslan Andiev took less than two minutes to score a fall over Jim Woods of Western Illinois University.

The U.S.'s momentary lead was short-lived as Telman Pashaev, 105.5 pounds, decisively beat Rosado, 21-7.

The Americans had picked up a two-point forfeit victory when 114.5 Roman Dmitriyev was unable to compete because of an ankle injury supposedly sustained in his match Tuesday night in New York.

Gonzales, who gained a draw against Pashaev

Tuesday when the Yanks lost, 16-4, said, "I saw Dmitriyev this morning and he pointed to his head indicating he had a fever."

Another Russian told me he had bruised ribs and the other story was he had a sprained ankle.

"I'm sorry I didn't get to meet him. My parents were here and all my friends."

The USSR took a 4-2 lead when 125.5 Vladimir Yumin decisively beat Sherman of Deerfield, Ill., 7-3.

Olympic and world champion Zaglav Abdulbekov decisively beat Lloyd Ford, 136.5, of Kansas City, 8-1. Abdulbekov is the oldest member of the Soviet squad at 29.

Nasrula Nasrulaev, who lost to America's Dan Gable in the finals at Munich in 1972, scored a decisive 14-1 win over Richard Lawinger of Madison, Wis. in the 149.5 division.

In the 163-pound division, Alan Albright, who wrestled at Norwalk High, was beaten when Ruslan Ashuraliyev scored a fall with one second remaining in the second period to give the visitors a 10-2 lead after six matches.

Vasilij Suljin won by a fall in the second period over James Tanniehill, 180.5, of Roseville, Minn.

In the 198-pound class, Russ Hellickson of Madison, Wis., now an assistant coach at the U. of Wisconsin, lost a close 5-2 decision to world champ Levan Tediashvili, who has not lost in three years.

The U.S. may not be able to beat the Russians in wrestling, but the Defense Department did Friday.

The Russians' planned tour of Long Beach's McDonnell Douglas plant was called off for no apparent reason.

"I got a call this morning saying we couldn't go through with the scheduled tour," Frank Horpel said with an embarrassed look.

The tournament director of the U.S.-Russian match at the Long Beach Arena Friday night explained, "I didn't know exactly what to tell the Russians."

"Instead, we compensated and took them to the Cerritos shopping center for a couple of hours."

Lakers 2 wins shy of playoffs

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

One down, two to go. That's the Laker playoff analysis today after they cleared another major hurdle Friday night by stopping the Chicago Bulls, 99-93, before 17,078 fans at the Forum.

If the Lakers sweep their remaining games against Buffalo Sunday and Seattle Tuesday, both at the Forum, they will head for Milwaukee and the playoffs next Friday no matter what Golden State does in its final four games.

The youngest Lakers, center Elmore Smith and guard Jim Price, sparked Friday's victory — the fifth in six games against the tough Bulls, who haven't lost a season series to any other team.

SMITH, a 43 per cent shooter all season, hit an amazing 14 of 17 field goal tries en route to a season best of 29 points. He also led both teams with 16 rebounds.

In the last five games the 7-footer has averaged 24.3 points and hit 51 of 80 shots, a robust 63.7.

If there is a secret to his success, the quiet young man isn't divulging it. In fact, he refuses to speak with reporters after being misquoted last week as being unhappy with the way he has been coached this season.

"I have nothing to say; I'm allergic to writers," the 24-year-old said.

COACH Bill Sharman would not comment, either, saying he didn't want any controversy at this time in the season.

"The Bulls had a lot to say about Smith, however."

"He was dominating out there," stated coach Dick Motta.

"I've never seen him shoot with such confidence," said guard Jerry Sloan.

Smith was 5-for-5 in the third period when the Lakers opened up a 77-66 lead that never was reduced below six.

Price scored 12 of his 24 points in the third stanza and also drew praise from Sloan, a hard-nosed defender who is famous for making life miserable for opposing guards.

"He's an outstanding young prospect," said Sloan. "I had no idea he could go to his left so well."

PRICE, who is ambidextrous, put in several left-handed shots when he seemingly was trapped in the middle.

Shooting made the difference. The Lakers connected on .535 of their shots from the field, the third consecutive over .500 performance. The Bulls were a poor .376.

"We've been in a slump for a month," said Motta, whose defensive-minded team is only .403 in six games against the Lakers.

The victory, the Lakers' 14th in their last 18 games, was achieved with rebounding star Happy Hairston sidelined the final 15 minutes after receiving a cut over his left eye in a collision with teammate Smith.

It took seven stitches to close the wound. Hairston is expected to play Sunday against Buffalo, however.

"I feel a little woozy, but I'll be okay," he said.

Veteran Bill Bridges filled in admirably and connected on two long jumpers in the fourth period when the Bulls made a mild challenge. The husky forward tallied 10 points and added 14 rebounds in 28 minutes.

Gail Goodrich netted 16 points, none in the final period. It's rare for the Lakers to win when he doesn't score in the 20s.

Bob Love led the Bulls with 20 points but missed 22 of 31 shots. Sloan and Van Lier also were ineffective, failing on 11 of 26 attempts. Only Chet Walker (16 points) kept Chicago from being routed.

Southpaw guard Bobby Weiss, a Laker nemesis, didn't play due to a bruised left heel and it ended his iron-man streak at 538 games, spanning seven seasons.

The Bulls open post-season play against Detroit but need to win one of their last two games to keep the home-court advantage.

"I'm just thankful we don't play the Lakers," said Motta, whose team has lost the opening round to them the last four years.

If the Lakers qualify for the playoffs and beat Milwaukee, they would play Chicago in the conference finals if the Bulls whip Detroit.

Long Beach City College continued to dominate junior college gymnastics with a 159.86-147.27 victory over closest South Coast Conference challenger Pasadena Friday at LBCC.

The Vikings, who are undefeated in dual meets against junior colleges for the past six and one-half years, handed Pasadena its first conference defeat.

Tim Deeds of LBCC was the all-around winner with a 46.60 total and the Vik-

Vikings off-track; Pasadena, 77-59

Pasadena athletes won both hurdle events and the mile relay and had more depth in the field events to outpoint visiting Long Beach City College Friday, 77-59, in a Metropolitan Conference track meet.

Tom Niederhaus was the iron man for the winners, taking the 120 highs in 15.5 and the 440 intermediates in a meet record 53.7, then running the anchor leg on the mile relay quartet that clocked 3:20.4.

Long Beach dominated the sprints as Elbert

Shorts won the 220 (22.0) and was third in the 100 (10.0) and Bruce Smiley finished second in the fur-long (22.3) and won the 440 (49.4).

Jim Manion, Willie McGriff (the 100 winner) teamed with Shorts and Smiley to win the 440-relay in 42.0, and Jeff Haynes won the mile for the Vikings in 4:22.3.

Kings, in Cups,
up for CanucksBy AL LARSON
Staff Writer

In the past, the Kings had their problems getting motivated against the lower teams in the National Hockey League. But with only eight games remaining and a Stanley Cup playoff spot within reach, coach Bob Pulford's skaters have no excuse for not being up for every game.

"At this point we shouldn't have this trouble, because every point counts," Bob Murdoch said Friday, offering an explanation as the Kings prepare for tonight's Forum encounter with the Vancouver Canucks at 8 o'clock.

"We never have trouble getting up for Chicago and Boston," Murdoch said. "It's not tough to get up for teams like that. It's the lower teams in the standings that give us the most trouble."

The Kings will attempt to extend their undefeated string to a club-record equalling 10 in a row tonight in the finale of an all-unbeaten 9-game homestand.

The Kings are 1-1 with the Canucks this season and will try to rub out the embarrassment of a 4-3 setback at the hands of Vancouver last month in the Forum.

The Kings' dash for playoff riches finds them enjoying a three-point lead over Atlanta's fourth-place Flames and a juicy nine points over fifth-place St. Louis. The first four teams in each division qualify for the post-season tournament.

Here is a breakdown on games remaining of the four teams driving for the last two spots in the Western Division playoffs:

Kings (5 home)—Vancouver, New York Islanders, Montreal, Atlanta, Vancouver (3 road)—California, Minnesota, Vancouver.
 Atlanta (4 home)—N.Y. Islanders, Philadelphia, Minnesota, Pittsburgh (4 road)—Boston, Pittsburgh, Kings, California.
 St. Louis (4 home)—Philadelphia, Chicago, Buffalo.
 Minnesota (3 home)—Pittsburgh, Kings, Philadelphia (3 road)—Chicago, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Buffalo, N.Y. Islanders, Philadelphia.

RUSSIANS HOLD CLINIC

If you're interested in the finer points of freestyle wrestling, the Russians will show you today.

For the first time ever, the Soviet team will conduct a clinic which will be held in Long Beach State's men's gym from 9 to noon.

Admission is $1 and coaches and youngsters are invited to bring workout gear.

The Russian team boasts seven Olympic or World champions.

CERRITOS' KINCAID
SEEKS 500TH WIN

Wally Kincaid, who has piloted Cerritos College baseball teams to 10 conference titles and three state championships in his 16-year tenure, may reach one of his few remaining landmarks today when the Falcons travel to Orange Coast College for a 1:30 p.m. game.

Kincaid, the winningest active junior college coach in California, needs only to defeat the Pirates to pocket his 500th career coaching victory and two statistics make that prospect appear likely.

First, Cerritos enjoys a 15-5 lifetime advantage over Orange Coast that includes two victories this season. Secondly, there is the matter of the 36-game winning streak that the Falcons are riding, the second-longest in their history and nine away from their state record of 45.

Southpaw Dan Boone, 7-0 this season and 16-1 lifetime with Cerritos, is expected to start for the Falcons, who own a three-game lead in the South Coast Conference.

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

A poodle-trained and hedge-trimmed tree usually is used as a specimen, a display. Such a tree is planted in the lawn or garden area where it is seen to best advantage.

Though it may be fun to train a tree into a poodle form, the gardener must periodically hedge trim it to keep the pompom shapes neat and trim.

Oliver tree branches lend themselves well to training. Secondary branches usually are selected for framework. These must be young willowy branches about three feet long. The main leader branch with younger branches growing from it, is bent down about three feet, and tied to the main leader branch.

Two quarter-inch thick bamboo stakes are used to tie all those willowy branches to them. The first stake is horizontally placed half way down from the main branch begins to bend. The willowy branches are spaced equally apart so the whole spread is about three feet wide. The second stake is placed horizontally at the ends of the willowy branches, and the branch ends are tied to that stake. Such is the beginning of the poodle-pompom shape.

As more new, shorter growths develop from the willowy branches, they begin to develop the poodle form. They are trimmed periodically as they grow taller, until finally the shape is achieved. The stakes eventually are removed.

The poodling training is an interesting and absorbing hobby.

The gardener will develop better blooming chrysanthemums if he digs up the old clumps and shakes off excess soil. The old clump roots should be inspected for possible nematode roots infestation. Small lumpy-knobby growths on roots indicate that critical problem.

Should such be the case, the gardener should cut the top new growth to about four inches and root the plant in sand or another rooting medium. The old mums should be thrown away and the soil fumigated with a chemical the local nurseryman will recommend to kill the nematodes. The cuttings eventually root.

Assuming there is no nematode infestation, the gardener merely replants those newly rooted chrysanthemums.

The soil of the old clumpy, mum bed should be rejuvenated before the mums are replanted. One method is to prepare the whole bed by scattering two pounds of bone meal over each one hundred square foot area of soil, then adding an inch layer of quality grade steer manure or an organic planting mix, after which the ingredients should be dug down into the soil the depth of a shovel. Soak well, and the soil will be ready for planting a few days later. Another way to do the job is to prepare individual holes, mixing the bone meal and the organic material with the soil when setting out the plants.

There are lots of gardeners who still may not know that they can prolong the blooming period of their mums if they select some that flower early, others begin to bloom midseason, and a third group that finishes flowering late in the year, even overlapping into part of January. One can have some mums beginning to blossom in September, others in the latter part of October, still others in November, and finally the last in December and on into January. The gardener should not plant late-season mums if frost comes early. The happiest part of all is that the gardener can purchase smaller plants now to set them out.

GARDEN JOBS

There's a difference between the gardenia foliage yellowing normally from ones that blanch and are stunted. The mature oldest leaves tend to yellow faster as days become warmer and nights are still cold. Blanched leaves indicate a chlorotic condition that can be due to an alkali soil condition. The smaller leaves and shorter last year's branches growth cycles may be due to plant sunk too deep in the ground, or could be a lack of sufficient water due to looseness of the soil.

Brown leaf edges or spots in leaves of house plants is a sure indication the plants are kept too wet. Gardener should water them less frequently but refill pots with water several times.

Feed flowering bulbs a flower-fruit fertilizer for better blossoms next year. Give bulbs generous drinks of water.
